BIG DIAMOND IN TURKEY

Who Owns It—Woman Who Purchased Bird, or Butcher Who Dressed It?
For Dinner?

New York, Jan. 1.—The question of whether or not an unset diamond that drops from the interior of a New Year's turkey on a poultry dealer's chopping block belongs to the dealer or to the customer who's just paid for the turkey, has yet to be decided by the courts. The customer, however, made a quick decision yesterday in favor of the customer.

Allen Schweitzer, who is the son half of the poultry firm of Schweitzer & Son, on the Vesey street side of Washington market, was cleaning a twelve-pound turkey yesterday forenoon in his booth for Mrs. W. Marcus, wife of Willie Marcus, billiard hall proprietor at Ann and Nassau streets.

Mrs. Marcus, who intended to carry the turkey to her home at 193 Vernon avenue, Brooklyn, decided, after banding over $3 for the turkey, to lighten her market basket as much as possible by having young Schweitzer remove such of the turkey's inner belongings as were not edible.

"This turk was a glass eater back home, I guess," remarked Al Schweitzer as he noticed something glist among the gravel and corn that had just been removed from the gobbler's crop.

But the blue white gleam instantly had interested Mrs. Marcus tremendously. A few drops of water plus a bit of rubbing on the poultryman's apron convinced dealer and customer of what the bit of "glass" was a diamond. It was a half carat stone and, so experts in Willie's billiard hall later said, of the very best blue white variety.

The poultryman handed over the diamond to Mrs. Marcus after she had refused his offer of $40 for it.

WAS THE ONLY BOXLIKE SHIP

First and Last Craft of Its Kind Lost on Lake Michigan Forty-Six Years Ago

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 1.—Forty-six years ago the steamer Hippocampus was lost on Lake Michigan while bound from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Chicago, and with her were lost twenty-six persons, nine of them passengers and seventeen of the crew. Six passengers and nine members of the crew floated on wreckage until they were rescued by a passing boat. The loss caused considerable discussion by ship-builders and probably brought to an abrupt end the building of flat bottom, square, boxlike craft.

Although no definite reason for the loss of the craft was ever learned, it was generally attributed to her boxlike build. Built at St. Joseph in 1867, one year before she was lost, and expressly for the fruit trade, she was 82 feet long and 18 1/2 feet beam, with a hold depth of 8 feet. Necessarily of light draught, she was absolutely flat bottomed with perpendicular sides. As a result of being like a square box she could not ride the seas like other craft, but would roll up with her flat bottom and square sides onto a sea and then roll down off it.

A local vesselman delving through some old documents recently discovered a statement printed at that time as coming from James Trimble, a passenger on the boat, who floated on wreckage for many hours until rescued.

"On the way from the dock to the mouth of the river the boat rolled some, caused by striking the bank of the canal, but after we got outside she behaved well until about 2:30 a. m., when she began to roll heavily as though there was water in her hold and would not gather quickly," Trimble said at that time. "I turned in about 2:30 and had been in my room about half an hour when I heard Captain Brown call to the men to throw some of the freight overboard."

"When we reached the deck she lay partly on her beam ends on her port side. We all threw peaches overboard. She made another lurch the same way. I heard Captain Brown sing out to the man at the wheel to hard port."

"The cabin and boiler house went by the board and I went aft to the rigging and crawled out. When I got out to her cross-tree I saw something white floating. It looked like a gangway and I dropped down onto it. It was a door. It was the means of my rescue."

WILL AUCTION OFF BRIDGE

Old Clark's Ferry Viaduct Will Be Sold in Philadelphia

The old Clark's Ferry bridge, historic throughout the State, and the longest covered wooden viaduct in the world, will be sold at auction next April in Philadelphia.

The bridge is nearly half a mile long and was formerly used as a passage for the mules that drew the canal boats on the old Pennsylvania canal. The bridge is the only drive over the river between this city and Sunbury.

The sale is being made subject to condemnation proceedings instituted by Dauphin county and at the same time portions of the canal will be disposed of. The canal sales are being made to secure payment on its coupon bonds, many of which are outstanding and unpaid. The canal company was formed in 1866, but the use of the canal was entirely abandoned in 1901.

GERMANS ARE REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSSES AS THEY ATTACK RUSSIANS

Petrograd, Jan. 1.—The following statement from the general staff of the commander-in-chief was given out last night:

"On the left bank of the Vistula no important fighting took place to-day. Between the Vistula and the Pilica river we have successfully repulsed day and night attacks made by the Germans to the south of the road from Bolimow to Mednevice. To the north of the Rakawa river we repulsed the German offensive by a counter attack. Near the Pilica river in the vicinity of the village of Jesergetz, we allowed a German column which was attempting a night attack to approach to a point 300 paces from our trenches and then met it with a galling fire which dispersed the enemy. The enemy suffered enormous losses."

"In some districts we have been using hand grenades against the enemy with the greatest success."

"In the battle of Inowloz (to the east of Tomaszow) the enemy shifted his offensive from Tomaszow to the direction of Opoczno but midway between these two points, near the villages of Kamens and Mazornia, we succeeded in repulsing his attacks."

"We also repulsed the Austrian advance near Magozow (South Poland) and to the south of Pinczow near Zakrzew."

"In Western Galicia the fighting continued to develop to our advantage. Our troops stormed the fortifications established on the heights to the south of Kotan and Krempa, to the north of Barvinek and to the southwest of Jasliska. Through bayonet attacks we succeeded in the region of Baligrod, to the south of Laska, in inflicting on the enemy considerable losses. Whole companies were exterminated."

"Later in the evening of December 29, the enemy began to retreat precipitately. According to the data received from the front we captured on that day a number of officers, more than 3,000 prisoners and 15 mitrailleurs."
