Marrow Bones and Toast

Marrow bones and toast is a rich dainty that we only when the meat dealer has time and inclination to serve us with the where-with all to make it from.

The best marrow bone is the bone from a leg of beef cut between the knee and thigh. Sometimes you will see these small, marrow filled bones on butcher's stands, but not often. If you ask for them they come out in four-inch lengths or even shorter. They are not expensive.

Buy as many as you have persons to serve and then cook them by baking, steaming or boiling them and sending them to the table on hot toast.

If they are to be boiled or steamed select the longest ones and spread a little thick dough over the ends to keep the marrow in, then tie each bone in a cloth. Lay them in the steamer, or drop into boiling water. Cook until you think the marrow is well heated through. A large thick bone will need about thirty minutes and smaller ones in proportion. Remove the dough and the cloth from them, dry them nicely and serve as directed.

Sometimes a long leg of beef is boiled and then the marrow removed and sent in on toast but this way is not well liked.

The best way to prepare this rich dainty and the way hotel cooks do, is to cut three-inch marrow bones lengthwise with a sharp cleaver, leaving a little of the marrow in each half. Place the split bones in a shallow baking pan in a hot oven. Elevate one end of the pan so the excess fat in the marrow will drain out. Close the oven door and in ten minutes the marrow will be cooked and will not be so rich as though all the fat was still in it.

Sprinkle well with salt and pepper and arrange on hot platter with points of golden brown toast.

A garnish of water cress makes this a very handsome dish. Toasted English muffins may be substituted for bread toast and very tempting they are. Pull the muffins open so the point of the toasting fork may be slipped in, hold over heat until muffin is brown all over. Now pull it well open and spread with butter. Close again and fold in a napkin so all the good hotness will be saved until it reaches the table.

BOY OF 5 TO GET RICHES

Grandfather's Will Makes Him Chief Heir of Estate

Connellsville, Pa., Jan. 12.—Michael Hurley Hellen, 5 years old, will probably be the richest person in Connellsville. Under the will of his grandfather, Michael Hurley, who at the time of his death owned more Connellsville real estate than any one man, the boy will get the whole estate should he outlive his mother and her sisters.

The property is to be held in trust. A son-in-law and three daughters of Mr. Hurley, together with the widow, are to get monthly allowances, and on January 1 each year, the surplus income is to be divided among the three daughters. The boy will probably be a millionaire by the time he reaches majority.

The Best Coal For All Furnaces

Have you tried and tried to get a satisfactory coal for your furnace? One kind burns too fast and makes clinkers and another kind won't burn fast enough and of course doesn't give out enough heat.

As an all-around furnace coal: one that can nearly always be depended upon, we recommend Wilkes-Barre Stove Coal, size 1 1/2-inch to 2-inch, price $6.70.

Caution: Don't condemn Stove Coal if you have never used our Wilkes-Barre Stove Coal. Every dealer doesn't sell the same grade of coal. There are many varieties.

Let us send you a small amount for trial. Be sure and ask for Wilkes-Barre.

HARRISBURG TRADEMARK MAKES ITS APPEARANCE

Chamber of Commerce to Advertise the City as the Heart of Distribution and Can Prove the Claim—Want Merchants to Co-Operate

"Harrisburg the Heart of Distribution," will be called to the attention of everyone receiving correspondence from Harrisburg business houses through the use of a trademark design being furnished to members and printing houses by the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

HARRISBURG, PA. THE HEART OF DISTRIBUTION

THE CITY'S TRADEMARK That Harrisburg can rightfully claim to be "The Heart of Distribution" is shown by a statement received today (on Wednesday), by Secretary E. L. McGloin from William J. Harris, director of the census, Washington, which states that a special estimate made by them after measuring the districts taken in by six different circles, which gave the following results, as of April 15, 1910:

Table with 2 columns: Radius, Population. 50 miles, 981,000; 100 miles, 6,294,000; 200 miles, 20,100,000; 300 miles, 27,584,000; 400 miles, 36,806,000; 500 miles, 43,592,000.

Harrisburg reaches the above population by direct freight and passenger service. The Chamber of Commerce desires to have every business man in Harrisburg print the trademark shown on his letterheads, envelopes, advertising matter, labels, etc. They advise that it will cost nothing extra and it will show to the world that local people realize to the utmost the distinctive advantages of the city for business. It will perhaps induce interests who could transfer business here when serving the population mentioned above to get in touch with the Chamber of Commerce.

How to Cure a La Grippe Cough

"Coughs that hang on" demand treatment. Stop and think! Reason and common sense tell you that it is folly to "grin and bear it." Those racking la grippe coughs that wrench the body and cause soreness and pains in the lungs yield more quickly to Foley's Honey and Tar than to any other treatment. Forty years' record of success proves this. For coughs, colds, croup and other distressing ailments of throat, chest, lungs, larynx and bronchial tubes, you can find nothing that will compare with this reliable remedy. Geo. A. CURE FOR THE DIVORCE EVIL

Study of Home Relationships an Essential Part in Education to Preserve Marriage Ties

Washington, D. C., Jan. 12.—Study of home relationships, as an essential part of education, is the only cure for the divorce evil, according to Dr. B. A. Andrews, in a bulletin on "Education for the Home," just issued by the United States Bureau of Education. In the making and the conduct of a home man's responsibility is equal to woman's, according to Dr. Andrews. "As we have lately been emphasizing woman's responsibility for municipal and civic matters," he says, "so we may urge that men become more conscious of the home and their relation to it. It takes two to start a home and the child has a father as well as a mother."

"The basis of appreciation of the home is laid in the kindergarten. Household arts will henceforth be taught in the elementary schools, in a general way, while practical training in domestic science will be given to girls whose education is to end with the elementary school."

Practically all the State normal schools have organized household arts departments, according to Dr. Andrews. Of the colleges and universities, over 250 have definite courses of instruction in home economics. A number of government agencies, including the home education division of the Bureau of Education, the Children's Bureau, the Public Health Service and the Department of Agriculture, are all according to this bulletin, engaged in reinforcing the home and the school in social betterment.

"The child is school minded," says Dr. Andrews. "For this reason the child can be reached through the school. The school can help the home by reinforcing the natural interest of sharing in home activities, and by affording some practice in them." Among the plans for connecting the home and the school, that of giving "credit" at school for housework done at home is becoming widespread. The application of this idea is seen in what is known as the "Crete plan." It has been in successful operation for 10 years in Crete, Neb., and has been adopted in 50 or more high schools in that State and in neighboring ones. This plan secures the cooperation of women able and willing to teach cooking of some given article. As many as 20 articles are included in the course. Girls thereby see the interior of many good homes and gain impressions of good housekeeping. Girls become interested in cooking, with the result that they are often found in the kitchen when their mothers entertain in the parlor. The plan has been said to be "the most democratic form of co-operation, and the best method of philanthropy yet discovered."

HEARTS and MASKS

BY HAROLD MACGRATH AUTHOR OF THE MAN ON THE BOX ETC.

"I will call a conveyance for you," said the defeated M. F. H. "I shall never forgive you Dicky."

"Yes, you will, Teddy. A loving-cup, the next time we meet at the club, will mellow everything."

Quarter of an hour later Miss Hawthorne and I, wrapped in buffalo-ropes, our feet snugly stowed away in straw, slid away to the jangle and quarrel of sleighbells, toward Moriarty's Holly-wood Inn. The moon shone; not a cloud darkened her serene and lovely countenance. The pearly whiteness of the world would have aroused the poetry in the most sordid soul; and far, far away to the east the black, tossing line of the sea was visible.

"What a beautiful night!" I volunteered.

"The beginning of the end." "The beginning of the end? What does that mean?"

"Why, when you first spoke to me, it was about the weather."

"Oh, but this isn't going to be the end; this is the true beginning of all things."

"I wish I could see it in that light; but we can not see beauty in anything when hunger lies back of the eyes. I haven't had anything to eat, save that single apple, for hours and hours. I was so excited at Mouquin's that I ate almost nothing."

"You are hungry? Well, we'll fix that when we get to Moriarty's. I'll find a way to waking him up, in case he's asleep, which I don't know. There will be cold chicken and ham and hot coffee."

"Lovely!" "And we shall dine with the gods. And now it is all over and done. It was funny, wasn't it?"

"Terribly funny!"—with a shade of irony. "It would have been funnier still if the real Haggerty hadn't turned up. The patrol had arrived."

"But it didn't happen. I shall never forget this night,"—romantically.

"I should be immoderately glad to forget it completely,"—decidedly.

"Where's your romance?" I asked. "I'd rather have it served to me between book-covers. As I grow older my love of repose increases."

"Do you know," I began boldly. "It seems that I have known you all my life."

"Indeed?" "Yes, Way, I might really have known you all my life, and still not have known you as well as I do this very minute, and less than a dozen hours between this and our first meeting. You are as brave as a paladin, wise as a serpent, cool, witty—and beautiful!"

"I shall ask the driver to let me out?" Then she laughed, a rollicking joyous laugh.

"What is so funny?" "Well, I didn't permit a lonely potato to frighten me," I retorted.

"No, you were brave enough—among the potatoes."

"You are beautiful!" "I am hungry."

"You are the most beautiful girl—" "I want something to eat."

"I ever saw! Do you think it possible for a man to fall in love at first sight?"

"Oh, nothing is impossible on Tom Fool's night. Positive, fool; comparative, fooler; superlative, fooliest. You are marching on with your degrees, Mr. Comstalk."

"You might call me Dicky," I said in an aggrieved tone.

"Dicky? Never! I should always be thinking of paper collars."

"I wish I were witty like that!" She snuggled down beneath the robes.

An artist's model, thought I. Never in this world. I now understood the drift of her uncle's remark about her earning capacity. The Alice Hawthorne miniatures brought fabulous prices. And here I was, sitting so close to her that our shoulders touched; and she a girl who knew intimately emperors and princesses and dukes, not to mention the world-ly-rich. I admit that for a moment I was touched with awe. And it was beginning to get serious. This girl interested me marvelously. I summoned up all my courage.

"Are—are you married?" "No-o."

"Nor engaged to be married?" "No-o. But you mustn't ask all these questions."

"How would you like to ride around in a first-class motor-car the rest of your days?" She laughed merrily. Possibly it was funny.

"Are you always amusing like this?" "Supposing I were serious?"

"In that case I should say you had not yet slipped off your fool's motley." This directness was discouraging.

"I wonder if the ten of hearts is lucky, after all. I mused.

"We are not in jail. I consider that the best of good fortune."

"Give me your card," said I. She gave me the card, and I put it with mine.

"Why do you do that?" "Perhaps I want to bring about an enchantment,"—soberly.

"As Signor Fantoccini, or as Mr. Comstalk?" "I have long since resigned my position in the museum; it was too exciting."

She made no rejoinder; and for some time there was no sound but the music of the bells.

Finally we drew up under the colonial porte-cochere of Hollywood Inn and were welcomed by the genial Moriarty himself, his Celtic countenance a mirror of smiles.

"Anything in the house to eat?" I cried, shaking the robes from me.

"Anything so like if you like could

I know of you? Nothing, save that there is a kindred spirit which is always likely to lead us into trouble. Down in your heart you know you are only temporarily affected by moonshine. Come, make me a toast!"—lifting, her cup.

"You are right," said I. "I am a gentleman. But it was only consistent that, having been the fool, I should now play the ass. Here's!"—and I held up my cup.

But neither of us drank; there wasn't time.

For the door opened quietly, and in walked the two men we had seen upon entering the Inn. One of them gently closed the door and locked it. One was in solled every-day clothes, the other in immaculate evening dress. The latter doffed his opera hat with the most engaging smile imaginable. The girl and I looked up at him in blank bewilderment, and set our cups down so mechanically that the warm amber liquid splattered on the tablecloth.

Galloping Dick and the affable inspector of the cellars stood before us! To Be Continued.

The above story "Hearts and Masks" will be motion at Photography Theatre in motion pictures in the near future.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC To-night, lecture by Armgard Karl Graves, the super-spy. Friday evening only, Ethel Barrymore, in her new play, "The Shadow."

ORPHEUM Every afternoon and evening, high class vaudeville.

COLONIAL Every afternoon and evening, vaudeville and pictures.

Armgard Karl Graves Ever since the outbreak of hostilities in Europe five months ago, there have been a number of conflicting reports spread broadcast as to the incidents and conditions responsible. It is doubtful if any two people can agree upon all of the "inside facts" which plunged nearly all of Europe into warfare, because of these one-sided stories, so that when an opportunity is afforded to hear and learn the "real" facts, such opportunity should not be missed. The public wants to know, and at the Majestic this evening upon the occasion of the appearance in this city of Dr. Armgard Karl Graves, former German spy, the true facts will be made known.

In his lecture, Dr. Graves will not only tell of the incidents which really prompted the war, but he will tell other reasons why Germany and Austria and Britain and France and Russia and Servia and now Turkey are engaged in deadly warfare. Also, Dr. Graves will tell a whole lot of news which, to date, has not been made public, but which will be from time to time. Through means of his own, Graves is enabled to possess himself of facts which no other person in this country can procure, and it is these "inside facts" which go to make an interesting, gripping and sensational narrative.

Adv. * Ethel Barrymore Of the stars sent to us by Charles Frohman during the course of a theatrical season, none is more sure of a warm welcome than Miss Ethel Barrymore, and the announcement of this favorite player's appearance at the Majestic Theatre, for one performance on Friday evening is doubly welcome. Miss Barrymore is seen on the occasion of this present visit in a new play entitled "The Shadow," by Dario Nicodemini and Michael Morton. The former is the author of several successes written for Madame Sevrance and produced in Paris. In fact, "The Shadow," under its original French title of "L'Ombre," was written for that celebrated French artist, but receives its first performance in America owing to the intolerable war conditions now prevailing in France. The American translation was made by Mr. Morton, most easily recalled as the author of "The Yellow Ticket."

The company surrounding Miss Barrymore is a notable one, including Bruce McRae, recalled for his earlier association with Miss Barrymore in "Gossamer," "Sundays," "Lally Frederick," "Captain Jinks," and others of her successes; Grace Elliston, Ernest Lawford, Edward Fielding, Amy Veness and Vera Pole. The scenes of "The Shadow" are laid in the wealthy residential and art district of Paris.

Adv. * Al G. Field's Minstrels Bert Swor, who heads the comedy contingent with the Al G. Field Minstrels, is conceded to be the most original, unique and popular of minstrel entertainers now before the public. Of but little less standing are Joe Coffman, West Abey and Jack Kennedy—all with records of enthusiastic audiences. Successful associates of these in the fun frolic presided over by Bert Swor, are Harry Young, Henri Neiser, Denny Ryan, Eddie Urig.

Minstrelsy was born in song, and the minstrel show with the history of success boasted by the Al G. Field Minstrels is sure to have recognized this by presenting talented vocalists, Jack Richards, foremost among minstrel balladists, is surrounded by a host of charming singers, both in solo and chorus work. Familiar to the public are the names of Paul LeLonde, Herbert Willson, Charles E. Hughes, J. Lester Haberkorn, Bireb Logan, Billy Argall, Ralph R. Scott, Harry Frillman, A. J. Kessner and Thomas Denton. The vocal numbers are all enhanced through the interpretations given by Thomas P. Roper's Orchestra.

Adv. * At the Orpheum So many good things are embraced in the new Keith show that came to the Orpheum yesterday, that it comes down to a matter of taste as to just which act is the best. Many delighted in "A Breath of Old Virginia," a beautiful southern romance, delightfully staged, excellently played and refreshing in theme. It tells a charming romance mixed with southern chivalry that is as novel as it is good. Others there are who will take to Bert Lamont and his Cowboy Minstrels, a frolic by typical western boys, who are pretty good singers and who entertain with their pranks and songs in a beautiful western setting. Music lovers as well as admirers of the artistic will revel in the Moneta Five, three women and two men, who present an exquisite vocal and instrumental act. Smith, Cook and Branden, pretty miss and two original and clever comedians, hand out a nifty hojo-podge of nonsense, and there are three or four others of almost equal rank and importance that round out a very pleasing and very deserving show.

Adv. * At the Colonial The Mendelssohn Four, monarchs or melody, are playing a return engagement at the "Busy Corner" these days and are proving the same big hit they were on their former visit here. Three young women and a man comprise the quartet and their act is an artistic treat. Vaudeville's prettiest novelty "Lora," the girl in the parrot, is another of the early week attractions. Hayes and Thatcher, presenting a musical comedy skit, and Johnson and Crane, singing, dancing and talking comedians, complete the vaudeville roster.
