COLLECTING STREET CAR FARES

In at least two cities,—Cleveland and Detroit,—a new experiment is being tried in the collection of street car fares.

The latest plan, unless several others have been evolved over night, provides for the stationing of collectors at important corners to whom prospective passengers pay their fares before entering cars.

Although the pay-as-you-enter plan has been in successful operation in this city for several years and seems to be fully satisfactory both to the traction company and to the passengers it is evidently not so well thought of in larger cities.

Street railway companies in the larger cities have been doing their best to solve the problems of fare collection, and it is perhaps not so much their fault as the fault of the passengers that their various plans do not give entire satisfaction.

Then, too, companies have provided patrons with tickets to slip to the conductors that there might be no delay, but thoughtless persons have persisted in boarding cars without having any of the tickets with them.

A traction company and its patrons are not able to get together happily in the matter of fare collection in any city unless the patrons are reasonable about complying with the necessary rules of any system which the company thinks best to establish for public convenience.

"HONORABLE BILL" ADAMS AND HIS PIG

We do not believe that the "Honorable Bill" Adams, Representative from Luzerne county, will have to pay a fine of $100 for having violated a city ordinance by installing a live pig in the $13,000,000 capitol.

Fact is the members of the House, when they reassemble next Monday evening, should give a vote of thanks to the "Honorable Bill" for having a sense of humor.

dull than the constant succession of self-laudatory departmental reports.

It is a relief to read something from Capitol Hill that has a little real human interest in it. Most of our law-makers in the present session appear to be very serious-minded individuals who are in need of just such fun-producing antidote as the wag from Luzerne has injected into their official lives.

And as for the "Honorable Bill" himself,—the man who once offered to swim the Susquehanna river in mid-winter, has been fined by Mayor Royal for a disturbance he caused in Market street during an argument as to the proper way to execute a military salute and who plans to introduce a law to name a county after Senator Penrose,—he is a born joker and doesn't care how much newspaper publicity comes to him through the pig incident or any other incident.

COMPLAINTS ABOUT THE PARCEL POST A protest has been made by a committee of the New York Merchants' Association to the Postoffice Department concerning imperfections in the parcel post.

The conditions mentioned in the first complaint may or may not be largely prevalent. There are unquestionably times when fragile packages do not travel long distances by parcel post without injury.

An uninsured package is mailed at the sender's risk and it is the sender's business properly to enclose an article rather than the mail men's business tenderly to care for an improperly wrapped parcel.

The complaint about inconvenience in mailing parcels, it must be admitted, is a well founded one. The parcel post has grown into so tremendous a business that better facilities need to be given to its patrons.

The State Poultrymen want a Chicken Bureau at State College. Does that mean State is to be co-ed?

The State Legislator who proposes to loose a live porker in the House on Monday night should be better informed. There is no river and harbor bill before that body.

The State is willing to hand over $10,000 of his Nobel peace prize for the benefit of the sufferers through the war in Europe. Thus does peace benefit in divers ways.

GETTING BACK AT HIM An ostentatious member of a certain County Council whose father is well known as a retired omnibus driver was one day displaying a large seal he usually wears, representing St. George and the Dragon, and while several bystanders were expressing their admiration of it, its owner remarked, in solemn tones:

Senator Has Oil Wells Senator Marshall Phipps, of Franklin, Venango county, is an oil producer and consequently is very much interested when the price of oil goes up or down a few cents.

Senator Need Not Starve Just at present the price of oil at the well is $1.50 per barrel, so that if Senator Phipps' wells produce a combined average of sixty-one barrels per day he has an income of $91 per day, which is not doing so poorly for a State Senator, and will help to keep the wolf from the Senatorial door.

Banquet Marks Close of Three-Day Convention Here—Resolutions Adopted Calling for Public Support in Proposed Fight on Legalized Censorship

John Price Jackson, Commissioner of Labor and Industry, and J. W. Binder, of New York, a member of the National Board of Censorship, were the guests of honor at a banquet given in the Plaza hotel last night by the Harrisburg motion picture exhibitors as the closing event of the three-day State convention of the newly-formed Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania.

The final business session was held in the Bolton house in the afternoon. It was decided to hold the next convention in Reading on June 7, 8 and 9. Frank A. Gould, of Reading, publicly manager of the league, said that Reading is fast becoming a convention city and that seventy conventions of various sorts are booked to be held there in the next few months.

Whereas, it is currently reported that the legislature of this state will soon be asked to pass a new building code; Whereas, the provisions of the proposed measure would result in a fact amount to confiscation as far as the theatres of this state are concerned, therefore be it

Resolved, That we most emphatically protest against the enactment of any such drastic law and take proper measures to defeat the said proposed building code.

We therefore appeal to the American press to unite with us in resisting the almost every attempt to abridge the liberty of the screen. We believe that no censorship is necessary because the motion picture as such is the press under the constant influence of public opinion and the laws now on the statute books are amply sufficient to deal with objectionable pictures as they are amply sufficient to deal with newspapers offending against the law.

We urge all citizens of Pennsylvania, of whatever political creed, to protest against the legalized censorship and to write to their representatives in the legislature asking them to vote for a speedy repeal of the censorship law.
