RIFLE SIGHTS The Drop of the Bullet in Its Flight Makes Them Necessary. The average person if asked to explain why a rifle is sighted would probably be unable to do so beyond some vague remark about taking correct aim. Sight is necessary because a bullet does not travel in a straight line, but, under the influence of gravity and friction, begins to drop almost as soon as it leaves the muzzle. Thus the bullet of the British service drops six inches in the first 100 yards, but when it has gone 200 yards it will have dropped not twelve inches, but two feet. The drop increases by leaps and bounds with the distance. Were there no sights on the rifle and you wanted to hit a mark at 200 yards you would have to aim two feet above it. This would be awkward, for you would lose sight of the mark aimed at, to say nothing of the difficulty of correctly estimating a distance of two feet at 200 yards. The sight of a rifle enables you to keep your eye on the mark, although the muzzle of the rifle is actually pointing above it. The movable slide of the backsight enables you automatically to point the muzzle just so many feet above the mark aimed at as is necessary to counteract the known drop of the bullet at various ranges.—London Answers.

EVANGELIST ON EXCUSES

Mechanicsburg Tabernacle Visited by Delegations From Neighboring Towns Last Night. Mechanicsburg, Feb. 4.—The tabernacle service began last evening as usual with a service of song. Visiting delegations from Eberly's Mills and Middlesex were present. The choir sang "Why Not Now," for the Eberly's Mills people, and "All Hail Infancy" for Middlesex. At a season of song, the Rev. George M. Fulton led in prayer. The Scripture lesson, the latter part of the tenth chapter of Mark, was read by the Rev. L. M. Dice. Then Miss Cree sang a solo, with feeling. Evangelist Miller's sermon was on the subject of excuses. The text, which was from Paul's epistle to the Romans, "And Now, Lord, Wait a Little For My Hope is in Thee." Mr. Miller said: "Every Christian has had some trouble to be one. It is easy to be bad, but not easy to be good. All great leaders in every department of life have fought great battles. All achievements are hard. Blind Bartimeus had one opportunity to get his eyes and he has opened. One of us has had at least one opportunity to have Jesus open our spiritual eyes. The preacher now compared the person in spiritual blindness with Bartimeus. First, the sinner must realize that he is blind, and he must believe that Jesus can open his eyes. The blind man's belief in his receiving his sight. The sinner's faith will save him, also. God's promises are sure. When you accept his promises you are saved. 'Time to consider' is one of the excuses. 'Fear of acting under excitement,' 'Not quite ready,' 'Belief in predestination,' 'Too low down to be saved,' 'Don't understand how walking forward in a meeting can bring salvation.' Afraid of not holding out, 'Don't feel like becoming a Christian,' are the most generally offered excuses." Mr. Miller answered each excuse with very convincing arguments and illustrations. He left no shred of excuse for the unsaved. The building was well filled, and the hearers listened with interest. At the conclusion of the service, during the singing of invitation hymns, thirty-seven accepted salvation. Among them were young and old, in some instances parents with sons and daughters. This evening, about 400 members of the Stough choir are expected. The regular choir will occupy seats in the rear of the tabernacle, thus vacating the choir loft for the visiting choir. HOW TO GET RID OF DYSPEPSIA

Don't Rely on Medicine; Don't Go on Freak Diet; Common Sense and an Antacid Usually All That Are Needed.

"If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching, distress after eating, heartburn or any other stomach trouble due to hyperacidity (the usual cause of stomach troubles), you should take no medicine to act upon the stomach itself. That is positively not the way to cure the trouble. First, you should not half starve yourself by going without the nutritious food that you need to rebuild waste tissues. Some foods are not good for people even though they are perfect healthy very rich, sweet, highly seasoned dishes. Avoid these, but eat fairly substantial meals of plain foods. Eat slowly. Even if you drink nothing but water, you should not drink with meals. Drink before and after eating. Do not take pepsin or other artificial digestants. If you follow the foregoing simple instructions it is probable that you will not need any medicine at all except, if you want to call it medicine, a little antacid after meals. The best antacid is ordinary bicarbonate of soda, which can be purchased at any drug store. This is not to act upon the stomach but on the contents of the stomach. The antacid, as you can learn by consulting your dictionary or encyclopedia, is merely of neutral or counter-act the excess acid of the stomach. An acid digest the food normally. Take a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda with the cold or hot water after each meal. You should get immediate relief, even if your case is severe. Careful moderation in eating and drinking, and a normal course of life, will usually cure. Have not allowed dyspepsia to advance to the extreme stage of developing stomach ulcers.—Adv.

THE RED CROSS Its Real Origin Dates to Napoleon's Italian Campaign of 1859

The Red Cross owes its real origin to the great and terrible campaign of 1859, when Napoleon made it his boast that he would free Italy "from the Alps to the Adriatic." At the great battle of Magenta, 10,000 Austrians and some 5,000 French soldiers were left dead and dying on the fields. A Swiss gentleman, named M. Henri Dunant, made a pilgrimage to that battlefield and was an involuntary eyewitness of the awful carnage of the battle of Solferino, a battle which lasted some sixteen hours and left some 20,000 dead and wounded. Henri Dunant realized that the medical service of what was probably the greatest army in the world was absolutely inadequate to cope with the casualties, and he was at once compelled to take some action to rectify the matter. The result was that he wrote a small book for private circulation, entitled "Un Souvenir de Solferino," and this, with his private appeal, resulted in Napoleon III, commanding Dunant to his presence, where, with the great Marshal MacMahon, they seriously talked matters over. The result of this was a conference of the powers, called together by the Swiss federal government, at which Henri Dunant placed his proposals. Out of this Geneva conference of 1864 resulted the Geneva convention, under which all medical supplies and personnel in war time are protected.
