British Life Guards
England's famous Life guards, now regarded as the oldest cavalry command in the world, were organized just after the restoration. They were recruited from the old cavaliers who fought for Prince Charles Stuart, and in 1661 they were formed into three troops, then known as the King's Own, the Duke of York's and the Duke of Albemarle's. At that time it was always demanded that one troop should be raised in Scotland in honor of the House of Stuart. It was the duty of the Life guards to protect the sovereign and the royal family.—Argonaut.

CLASSIC WAR POEMS

Selected by J. Howard Wert

No. 7. HOW SLEEP THE BRAVE

BY WILLIAM COLLINS

The English poet, William Collins, was born in 1720 and died in 1756. The well-known lines here given were written in commemoration of those who fell in the battle of Culloden Moor, April 16, 1746.

While George II of England was engaged in the war of the "Austrian Succession," Charles Edward, who was called the "Young Pretender," a grandson of King James II of England, landed in Scotland, and made two attempts to obtain the throne of his ancestors. He was victorious in the battle of Falkirk; but the Duke of Cumberland, son of George II, having been recalled from that continent to take command of the King's forces, the Pretender was entirely defeated at Culloden Moor, a plain in Scotland, four miles from Inverness. This was the last battle fought on the island of Great Britain, and it was also the last attempt on the part of the Stuart family to recover the throne of Great Britain.

Charles Edward Stuart escaped to France after he had wandered for five months in the Highlands, pursued by his enemies. He died in Rome, January 30, 1788. The Duke of Cumberland gave no quarter. The wounded were all slain and the jails of England were filled with prisoners, many of whom were executed. Among the latter number were Lords Balmerino, Kilmarnock and Lovat—Lovat being the last person who was beheaded in England.

How sleep the Brave, who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.
By fairy hands their knell is rung;
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall a sweeter repair,
To dwell, a weeping hermit, there!
