AUTO IS USED TO PULL A TRAIN

KANSAS GASOLINE RAILROAD TRAIN

The only gasoline railroad in America is in operation in Pottawatomie county, Kansas. It is the Westmoreland Interurban Railway Company, the successor to the Kansas, Southern and Gulf, one of those north and south railroad dreams of the early eighties. The Kansas Charter Board recently gave a charter to the new gasoline railroad, which cannot operate its line except by motor. The motive power of the road is now a second hand motor car that hauls small freight cars and passengers.

CLASSIC WAR POEMS

Selected by J. Howard Wert

No. 8. THE DYING CHIEF

BY ELMIRA FREEMAN

Elmira Freeman, an English poetess of great vigor of expression, had a romantic and checked career. Married, in early life, to Sir Richard Barton, they lived unhappily together and were soon divorced. Married, subsequently, to Charles Weston, a country gentleman, she deserted him and established herself in France.

This is one of the many poems that have had their origin from incidents connected with battles between the Castilians and the Saracens for the possession of the Iberian peninsula. It was from the romances and heroisms of these contests, extending over centuries, that Washington Irving drew the inspiration to which we are indebted for several of his ablest works tracing the rise and fall of the Mohammedan power in Spain.

The stars look'd down on the battle plain,
Where night-winds were deeply sighing,
And with shatter'd lance near his war steed slain,
Lay a youthful chieftain dying.

He had folded round his gallant breast
The banner, once o'er him streaming,
For a noble shroud, as he sunk to rest
On the couch that knows no dreaming.

Proudly he lay on his broken shield,
By the rushing Guadalquivir,
While, dark with the blood of his last red field,
Swept on the majestic river.

There were hands which came to bind his wound,
There were eyes o'er the warrior weeping,
But he raised his head from the dewy ground,
Where the land's high hearts were sleeping!

And "Away!" he cried—"your aid is vain,
My soul may not brook recalling,—
I have seen the stately flower of Spain
Like the autumn vine leaves falling!

"I have seen the Moorish banners wave
O'er the halls where my youth was cherish'd;
I have drawn a sword that could not save,
I have stood where my king hath perish'd;

Leave me to die with the free and brave,
On the banks of my own bright river!
Ye can give me naught but a warrior's grave,
By the chainless Guadalquivir!"

PLAN FOR RESCUE MISSION

Board of Directors Met Saturday to Discuss Financing New Project

With a view of collecting the subscriptions recently pledged at the Trotter mass meeting, the board of directors of the City Rescue Mission made arrangements Saturday to ascertain what amount of the $2,501 pledged could be secured. Three banks, one in the north-east, one in the central and another on the Hill, will be made depositories for the subscribers.

Mr. Trotter, who is head of the mission believes that $500 over the subscribed amount can be raised. It was further stated by Mr. Trotter that many business men who were unable to attend the meetings are favorably inclined to the work and will help raise the amount. The plan as arranged will be payment by installment, that is have subscribers pay at the banks semi-yearly, quarterly or monthly.

The mission will continue in charge of Superintendent Griffith Jones, who came to this city from Seranton the latter part of last summer. He assumed charge September 1, and up until December 1, he furnished the room, administered spiritual aid and paid all expenses. The mission is open for business from 9 to 10 o'clock in the morning and from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Gospel meetings are also held every evening at 7.30 o'clock.

A great deal of personal work will be conducted by the mission in the form of visits to the jail, almshouse, hospitals and other charitable institutions. Speakers for the nightly meetings are asked for as well as clothes and other donations.

FARMER SHOOTSTEN GIRLS

Mery Party Coming to Surprise Bride Repelled by Shotgun

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 8.—William McIntosh, a wealthy farmer, was arrested in Lee county, yesterday, charged with shooting and seriously wounding ten young women. A daughter of McIntosh had married and she and her husband were visiting at McIntosh's home. Late at night a crowd of girl friends of the bride determined to pay her a surprise visit and take her some presents they had made for her. As the young women approached the McIntosh home the father, awakened from a sound sleep, thought the sounds of laughter came from a crowd of serenaders. McIntosh threw open a window and demanded that the noise cease, but the young women pressed on, laughing and talking.

McIntosh then opened fire on the crowd with a shotgun. He fired three shots, and wounded young women fell in every direction. Ten of them received serious wounds and others had their clothing pierced with shot. None of the merry-makers will die, but the wounds are serious.

As soon as McIntosh realized what he had done he summoned help and assisted the injured girls into the house. Feeling is running high against McIntosh, who was taken to jail, and is held there pending the outcome of the hurts to the girls.

GRAVE DIGGER ENDS LIFE

Allentown, Feb. 8.—Despondent because work was slack, Francis D. Baer, a grave digger, 46 years old, committed suicide yesterday while his wife and daughter were in church. He pulled the hose from a gas heater and stuck the end in his mouth with the jet turned on full force. There was such a quantity of gas in the house that the women were temporarily overpowered when they returned. Baer was a native of Bernville and a brother-in-law of Lott Reiff, of Oley, one of the Democratic leaders of Berks, who was delegate from that county to the National convention at Baltimore. He was a prominent member of the Baer Family Association, headed by the late George F. Baer.

About the same time Charles Lehr, a blacksmith, 28 years old, made two unsuccessful attempts at suicide. When Lehr tried to hang himself in a room in the Hotel Lehigh the rope broke and the noise of his fall brought the landlord. He said a girl in Bath had jilted him and life was unendurable. On leaving the hotel Lehr went to the smithy where he was employed. His employer was told, and he broke in the door and found Lehr hanging from a rafter. He cut the rope in time to save Lehr's life.
