The Sale of the Clafin Book Stock Brings Thousands of Volumes That Were Below Regular Prices at Additional Reductions of 30 to 60 Per Cent.

After the reorganization of the H. B. Clafin Company, which failed last Summer, the receivers ordered the closing out of their wholesale book business in which they had been engaged 18 years as the principal distributors of publishers' entire remainder at 50 to 75 per cent. lower than regular retail prices.

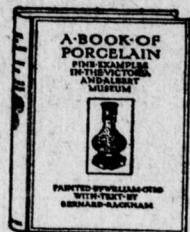

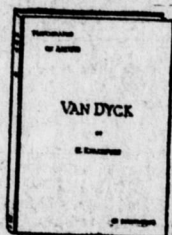

Our stores secured a large share of the sacrificed stocks and the bargains are the best that have obtained in such attractive books in many years.

The Popular Veil Hats

This is the leading millinery style of this mid-season and its popularity is deserved because of the fascinating effect the veil lends the hat.

We have just received the latest interpretation of this vogue and show veil hats in narrow brim satin for as little as $3.95.

These are not to be confounded with cheap hats or "seconds" that are flooding the markets these days with low prices as a bait.

Every hat shown here comes from a leading house and was personally selected for perfect quality and correctness in style.

- Small satin hats with narrow brims trimmed with a rose in front, veil edged with black, brown and rocky moun-tain blue, $3.95
- Black satin hat combined with mulline on side, veil edged with narrow satin, $3.95
- Large sailors of satin, tailored bow of narrow ribbon in front, veil edged with heavy fold of satin, brown and black, $3.95
- The new small sailors with narrow brim with straw braid around the crown, veil edged with novelty silk, $4.95
- Small turbans of brown hemp, veil edged with satin ribbon, $6.95
- Small turbans of brown, satin, fancy feather in front, veil edged with narrow velvet, $8.50

"THE VOLUNTEERS" A BIG PART OF ORPHEUM'S BILL

Quartet Which Pretends Not to Be in the Show Has One of Best Acts—Emma Carus Pleases With Tipperary Parodies

Since it is part of their act, "The Volunteers," a quartet of really delightful entertainers, are supposed not to be on the bill at the Orpheum, yet they provide one of the best of the week's offerings. After Billy Gripps appears on the stage and in song laments the fact that he must perform all alone, he calls for volunteers and Al Bunch, "the boob," joins him from the audience, Jerome Daley, "the stage hand," from behind the scenes, and Fred Lyon, "the leader," from the orchestra. The singing of the four is excellent and comedy is not lacking to add to the entertainment.

Emma Carus has brought her distinct personality to bear on the success of the new bill and is especially good in her Tipperary parodies. Her partner, Carl Randall, is a dancer worth seeing. The couple do the only dancing in the show, and bear the responsibility very satisfactorily.

Bert Fitzgibbon, "back again where the squirrels'll get him," is eccentric above all, and for that reason funny; his singing is good, but his acting is better. The playlet presented by Edward Esmonds and company is familiar to theatregoers, and, although not a line seems to have been changed, it is still as pleasing a piece as it was at former presentations at the Orpheum. The ease with which one can recall almost every action in the play serves to show how well the acting is done by the two performers.

Russell Mack and Blanch Vincent give a song sketch at the piano, the Kramers do gymnastic stunts, and the Welling Levering Troupe, in their comedy cycle act, bring the show to a close with a whirl.
