THE FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THE BRITISH " - AN INCIDENT ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Concerning this incident, drawn especially for this newspaper, the New York "Herald" and the London "Sphere," a British soldier at the front in a letter says: "I stopped for a few seconds by the side of a German who was dying. He was in great pain, and when I asked what! could do for him he said in a pathetic tone that went to my heart, 'Nothing unless you would be so good as to hold my hand until all is over.' I gave him my hand and stayed to the end. It seemed to comfort that poor chap a lot. He was able to speak good English, and we had quite a pleasant chat, considering the circumstances."
