TETANUS CONQUERABLE UNDER NEW DISCOVERY

War-Apparatus Very Compact Already on Way to Battlefields

New York, Feb. 26 .- Announcement New York, Feb. 26.—Announcement was made yesterday on behalf of the Rockefeller Institute, of the invention of an apparatus and the discovery of a new method of treatment, both designed to reduce the mortality from tetanus among soldiers wounded on European battlefields. Twenty-five apparatuses, it is said, have been sent to Europe by the Institute for use on the battlefield, and patents to the invention have been thrown open so that whoever wish may manufacture and use the apparatus.

battlefield, and patents to the invention have been thrown open so that whoever wish may manufacture and use the apparatus.

The Institute's investigators have found that most of the deaths among wounded men are due to tetanus and that the present method of treating tetanus has certain drawbacks.

An injection of a solution containing epsom salts into the membranes of the spinal cord is a part of the method of treatment, it is announced. Dr. F. J. Meftszer, of the Institute, is given credit for the few method. The belief is expressed that with this—enod of treatment and the use of the new apparatus—which is designed to aid in artificial respiration many more lives will be saved.

The announcement says that after an exhaustive investigation of conditions of wounded troops in Europe, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research has determined that lockjaw is the greatest scourge in the war. Tetanus germs thrived in the highly cultivated soil of Europe, the investigators found. The Institute said that there was but one known remedy for lockjaw and that was the injection of a prophylactic dose of anti-tetanus serum. Soldiers but one known remedy for lockjaw and that was the injection of a prophylactic dose of anti-tetanus serum. Soldiers had been taught to administer the serum in the trenches, when surgeons could not reach wounded men quick enough. Almost invariably, the investigators found, the disease was fatal, the greater number of fatalities being caused by violent convulsions developed by the soldiers infected. These convulsions were so severe that the soldier soon became exhausted and then suffocated. The treatment by serum has only been moderately successful, it was said.

The serum in many cases, it was said, did not act quickly enough and many soldiers have suffocated before it could take effect. Dr. Meltszer, after discovering that the injection of a solution of epsom salts would produce a complete relaxation of the miscles for several hours, or long enough for the serum to take effect, found that the relaxation in many cases was so complete as to cause the muscles of respi piete as to cause the muscles of respiration to cease their functions. It was to eliminate this danger that he devised the artificial respiration apparatus, which produces pharangeal insufflation. The apparatus is described as being small enough to carry in a suitcase.
