COMMUNITY ORGANIZED FOR NEIGHBORHOOD PATRIOTISM

Interesting Outline of Method for Securing Co-operation in Business and Social Affairs Among the Rural Population

Washington, D. C., March 5.—A scheme for the organization of rural communities for both business and social purposes is worked out in an article which is to appear in the forthcoming Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, and which has already been printed as a pamphlet for the use of the department's office of markets and rural organization.

The scheme calls for ten committees, five of which are to deal with business needs, and five with social needs. Every member of the organization is to serve on some one of these committees. In addition, there is to be a central or executive committee composed of the president of the organization, its secretary, its treasurer and the chairmen of the ten other committees. This central body is to direct the general policy of the organization, raise all funds and control their expenditures. The committees that are to deal with the business interests of the community are as follows:

Committee on farm production, committee on marketing, committee on securing farm supplies, committee on farm finance and accounting, committee on communication and transportation.

Similarly, the five committees that attend to the community's social interests will deal with education, sanitation, recreation, beautification, household economics.

The work of most of these committees is indicated sufficiently clearly by their titles; for example, the committee on production can do much good by improving the breeds of live stock in a community through co-operative purchases of pure-bred males. It can encourage the formation of corn, poultry, pig, cattle, canning and gardening clubs which have already demonstrated their value in the sections where they have been established, and it can carry on useful studies of the type of agriculture best fitted to local conditions.

In the same way, the committee on marketing can secure the standardization of the community's products and thus obtain better prices than are possible when nondescript goods are dumped upon the market. The committee can also search out the best markets, make contracts on a large scale which will be more favorable than any individual contracts for himself, and in many other ways not always possible to secure a good man for less than he would be able to make in business for himself.

There are, however, several methods of purchasing farm supplies co-operatively, which will be found to be of advantage. The simplest is the joint order, in which a group of farmers can buy a given article in large quantities, thereby effecting a considerable saving in the expense of handling, commissions, etc. Sometimes when this method is adopted a warehouse is added, and in which the goods are stored until the associated purchasers need them.

If these two methods have been tried and found successful, it may be desirable to carry them out to their logical development and conduct a co-operative store which renders the same service to its customers that a private enterprise would. This, however, inevitably leads to complications and should only be undertaken after some experience with simpler methods of co-operation.

With the committee on farm finance and accounting, the first duty is to ascertain what farm enterprises can safely be financed. This is only possible when accurate accounts are kept and carefully analyzed. After this has been done, the next step is to secure the most favorable terms for financing proper and sound enterprises. This is frequently not difficult if the committee has thoroughly mastered the subject and is able to put it clearly before the local bankers. Where the local bankers are unwilling to finance genuinely productive enterprises at a reasonable rate of interest, the committee must consider other ways of securing capital.

One of the simplest plans for accomplishing this is a credit union or co-operative credit association. The essential features of this plan are that a group of farmers organize themselves to receive deposits and make loans. By keeping the expenses down to a minimum, it has been possible in some cases for such associations to pay interest on deposits that is within one per cent. of the interest it charges on loans.

The committee on communication and transportation should deal primarily with the roads and telephone lines. The keynote of the work should be organization and self-help, not appeals to get government help.

Just as the five business committees are to grapple with the fundamental problems of producing and selling in their various forms, the five social committees should direct their efforts to the improvement of living conditions in the country.

To increase the farmer's income is not the only thing needed to make rural life what it should be. As a matter of fact, says this article, it is the prosperous farmer who is more inclined to move to town than his less fortunate neighbor. Having accumulated a competence he wishes to enjoy it, and there are five principal reasons which lead him to believe that he can do this better in the city: First, there are usually better facilities for educating his children; second, the sanitary conditions are frequently much better in towns, and the time does not seem to be far distant when the cities will be actually more healthful than the country. Again, household conveniences such as hot and cold water, heating and lighting systems, etc., are more abundant in the towns and add greatly to the comfort of living. Finally, there is more opportunity for recreation in the city, and, frequently, strange as it may appear, more to appeal to the sense of beauty that is inherent in practically every man.

Co-operation on the part of rural communities can do as much to alter these conditions as it can to increase the average cash income. The committees that have these matters in charge should, therefore, be regarded as quite as important as those which deal with business questions, and they should receive the same support from the entire community which they are endeavoring to benefit. The result will be a community spirit which, in its way, is capable of producing as valuable results as the national spirit. In fact, says the article in closing, "Patriotism, like charity, begins at home—that is, in the neighborhood."

These jewels, it was found, were the property of the wife of General Iturbe of Carranza's army, who had committed them to Saleevy, so that he could sell them in the United States to raise funds for the maintenance of an orphanage in Mexico, where 200 children, whose fathers had been killed in the war, were starving. It is said that the jewels probably will be returned to Saleevy.

POTATOES FOR SHIPMENT MUST BE SECURELY PACKED

Federal Inspectors Point Out the Need for Simple Precautions in Forwarding Food Through the Tropics to South America

Washington, D. C., March 5.—New markets in South America opened by the war to potato growers in this country are being endangered by lack of care in packing and shipping, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture. Before the war South America was supplied with its potatoes, in great measure at least, from Europe, and these orders have now been diverted to this country. Federal inspectors stationed in New York who have inspected potatoes offered for shipment to see that they complied with the requirements of the importing countries report, however, that because of the long voyage and the high temperatures encountered in the tropics, certain shipments from New York to Brazil and Uruguay have arrived in bad condition. Some of these potatoes were found to have been attacked by fungi, causing a soft rot, and others which appeared perfectly sound externally were black in the center.

To obviate this difficulty, shippers are urged to take a few simple precautions. In sorting and packing potatoes for export through the tropics the following points should be carefully observed:

- 1—All badly bruised or cut potatoes should be thrown out.
- 2—Frosted potatoes should be excluded.
- 3—No potatoes that have even small spots of dry rot or that show the sunken discolored spots caused by late blight should be included.
- 4—Barrels should be well ventilated by cutting a liberal number of holes in their sides.
- 5—The shippers should insist that the potatoes be stored in a cool, well ventilated part of the vessel.

Even a few potatoes damaged in one of the ways mentioned may be sufficient to spoil an entire barrel under the unfavorable conditions of high temperature and little or no ventilation. The blackening of the center, known to the trade as "black heart," can be brought about by exposing potatoes for 18 hours to temperatures ranging from 100 to 112 degrees Fahrenheit. Such temperatures are by no means unknown in unventilated compartments of vessels in the tropics. Moreover, even at considerably lower temperatures, the warmth and the moisture arising from the potatoes themselves create conditions naturally favorable to the development of the spores of various kinds of fungi which are always present in air-borne dust. These spores gain entrance through cuts and bruises and cause soft rot. At this season of the year also many potatoes are affected with dry rot that have developed in storage, and at spots of late blight infection. If such potatoes are exposed to a warm, humid temperature, it is almost certain that soft rot will take place in the affected spots.

CLUBS AID RELIEF WORK

Fraternal Organizations and Churches Contribute $250 In Week

After a week of solicitation among church and fraternal organizations of the city for contributions to the funds of the Home and War Relief committee, a total of close to $250 has been received by Treasurer Sweeney. The first donation was made last Friday night by the Keystone Motorcycle club. Members in their eagerness to be the first organization to aid the relief work, hurriedly canvassed those of their number and made a trip late in the evening to Treasurer Sweeney's residence with the receipts. Because they did not wait for banking hours to begin before making their contribution, they lead the list.

The organizations aiding the relief work to date are: Keystone Motorcycle club, Harris Street U. E. Sunday school, Pine Street Presbyterian church, Central Democratic club, Grace M. E. Sunday school, Capital Street Presbyterian Sunday school, Mount Calvary Episcopal church, Camp Hill; A. M. E. Wesleyan Union Zion church, Harrisburg Republican club; primary department, Market Square Presbyterian church, Dauphin conclave, Improved Order of Heptasoph, John Harris lodge, Knights of Pythias and College club of Harrisburg.

Collections will be taken up in a number of other churches this Sunday, it is expected, for the benefit of the committee's work.

Owing to the persistent ill health of Mrs. Drake and her efforts in regaining health, no announcement of her marriage was made, except to a few intimates. The marriage, supposed to have been solemnized within the past two years, came about through association, Mrs. Drake having been a trained nurse. Suffering with a malady, the treatment of which required her to be outdoors much of the time, and in order to make this convenient, and at the same time conceal her identity, she was adopted in marriage, boy's clothing was adopted. Mrs. Drake resembled a 17 or 18-year-old boy when about the physician's office or riding horseback.
