HENRY V BEFORE THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT

BY WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

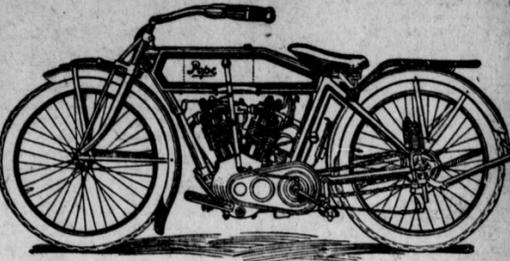

After the fall of the French city of Harfleur, in September, 1415, mentioned in the last selection, the English king, although he had lost more than half his original army in the siege, started on a march, through several provinces, to Calais.

The night was spent by the French in revelry and exultation over a victory which they deemed certain when the morrow's sun should rise. The principal subject of debate was the amount of ransom which should be demanded for King Henry and his nobles.

The language of King Henry here given was in reply to a wish expressed by the Earl of Westmoreland:—"O, that we now had here but one ten thousand of those men in England that do no work to-day!"

What's he that wishes for more men from England? My cousin Westmoreland! No, my fair cousin, if we are marked to die, we are enow to do our country loss; and if to live, Heaven's will! I pray thee wish not one man more. In truth, I am not covetous of gold, Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost; It yerns me not if men my garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desire; But if it be a sin to covet honor, No, good my lord, wish not a man from England; Heaven's peace, I would not lose so great an honor As one man more methinks would share from me. For the best hopes I have, wish not one more: Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host That he who hath no stomach to this fight, Let him depart, his passport shall be made, And crowns for convoy put into his purse; We would not die in that man's company That fears his fellowship to die with us. This day is called the feast of Crispian; He that outlives this day, and comes safe home, Will stand on tiptoe when this day is named. And round about his neck a chain shall run: Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars. This story shall the good man teach his son; And Crispian, Crispian, he'll go by From this day to the ending of the world, But we in it shall be remembered! We few, we happy few, we band of brothers!

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little into your hand and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of this awful scurf will have disappeared. Two or three applications will destroy every bit of dandruff; stop scalp itching and falling hair.—Adv.

DON'T TAKE CALOMEL

Instead of dangerous, salivating Calomel to liven your liver when bilious, headachy or constipated get a 10-cent box of Cascarets. They start the liver and bowels and straighten you up better than nasty Calomel, without griping or making you sick.—Adv.
