What Are Ashes?

Ashes are the "Mineral Impurities" like bone, slate, iron and lime, that are left after burning coal.

Ashes with a large amount of "Iron and Lime" are easily melted together and are likely to "Clinker" badly in a furnace.

It is important when buying coal to see that you get coal that has a minimum amount of "Mineral Impurities."

You know coal is not all alike, there are more than 300 Anthracite Mines in this state so that a dealer must understand his business to secure the kind that will give the best results.

We recommend our Wilkes-Barre coal to be as free from impurities as it is possible to get coal. No coal is absolutely pure.

Late War News Summary

grad reports a new movement of German forces in Poland. Following the heavy concentration of German troops for the renewed attack on Przasnysz near the Prussian border, reinforcements have been brought up in the Pilica river region, southwest of Poland. Petrograd believes, however, that these reinforcements are intended merely to hold the present positions rather than institute another attempt to break through the Russian line toward the Polish capital.

Concerning the great battle which Petrograd says is now in progress in Northern Poland few new details have been received. The Russian statement mentions a bombardment of Osowetz by German aviators but is silent as to the course of the main engagement.

The British attack in Belgium has brought on two vigorous counter movements by the Germans but is said in London that the ground gained has been held. In Champagne further progress for the French is claimed, although the German war office announced two days ago that this battle had been concluded.

M. Gounaris, Greece's new premier, has given specific assurance to France that the policy of his Cabinet will not rather than institute another attempt to be inimical to the interests of the allies, although the Gounaris ministry was created as a result of King Constantine's opposition to the former premier's policy of intervening in the war on their side.

A London dispatch states that Bulgaria, whose attitude has been a source of concern to Greece, is sending heavy artillery to a point close to the Greek frontier.

Constantinople is reported to be in a state of panic as a result of the attack on the Dardanelles. Although it is presumed that the bombardment of the fortifications is proceeding, there are few definite indications as to what is being accomplished, beyond the admitted fact that the forts near the entrance of the straits have been damaged if not destroyed.

handsomest residences. His associates, outside of school, were mostly farm hands and country boys; hers were talented folk of affairs drawn to her father's handsome home, for her father then was a member of the Ohio Legislature, a public-spirited citizen interested in philanthropies and a man of many activities. Notwithstanding other differences, the awkward youth and the city girl had in common a love of study and simple tastes, and they became fast friends.

Young Rockefeller prospered beyond his fondest hopes. As soon as he felt that he could ask her to become his wife he did so. They were married on September 8, 1864, the eve of her 25th birthday, and started to keep house in a little two-story brick residence on one of Cleveland's side streets. Upon her marriage, she became a Baptist and to her religion and her home she devoted her entire time.

"To be a good wife and mother is the highest and hardest privilege of a woman," was one of the sayings accredited to her by the little circle of friends she knew at this time. The borders of her world were her home. Her whole life was wrapped up in her husband and children. She avoided all social functions and joined no clubs.

When Mr. Rockefeller's wealth was mentioned in seven figures they left their first home for a residence remarkable only for its unpretentiousness on Euclid avenue, Cleveland's "mile of millions." Here Mrs. Rockefeller reared her four children; a fifth died in infancy.

Of her children, three are living. She was the mother of four daughters and one son, the last named, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., being the youngest. Her eldest daughter, Bessie, who married Prof. Charles A. Stroup, died in France in 1906 at the age of 40. The second daughter, Alice, died in infancy.
