COULD THIS BE THE REASON FOR THE CENSORSHIP? Feminine Portion of Harrisburg Contingent Who Saw Big Show in Carlisle, Complain of Nothing to Wear After Seeing Beautiful Gowns

If you haven't reserved all the seats you'll need for the Carlisle Elks' frolic at the Majestic Friday evening, Saturday matinee or Saturday evening, you'd better take this tip into yourself. Go right down to the box office and pick them out and—hurry. The seat sale opened yesterday and from all indications the question of obtaining suitable reservations twenty-four hours hence is going to be a very serious one. To-night the Carlisle Elks appear for the last of the three "opening night" series in their own home town and Friday morning the big troupe of fifty or more of the best looking members of the order in the Cumberland Valley will be guests of Harrisburg Elks during the week end. "They're At It Again" will be put on here for the benefit of the social committee of the local lodge. From Carlisle the committee of Harrisburg Elks and their wives who watched the first night performance, brought down all kinds of live-wire reports of the 1915 effort of Leo McDonald's Elk actor-folks; the feminine contingent was absorbed to the point of abstraction during that part of the show in which the big and delightfully gowned chorus came on and during the honeydew ride they were abstracted to the point of dreaminess. Many a puzzled Elk has since wondered at the wifely complaint of lack of "a thing to wear."

Perhaps a word as to what the show is to be won't be amiss. Objections it appears have been made as to the Elks masquerading as females and it has even been hinted that the play isn't really anything too nice for the community's morals. This led to a general protest of the more noble minded citizens and it is finally decided that the show cannot be produced until after having been passed upon by the censorship board of the borough.

The Elks play before the committee; the censors approve; the continuance of the piece is permitted, and one member of the board is so enthusiastic about it that he invites the company to his country home. The last act in the home.
