ANTS AND BEETLES EATING NOXIOUS CODLING MOTH

Studies of Destructive Insect in Appalachian Region by U. S. Department of Agriculture Reveals Great Saving to Apple Raisers

Washington, D. C., March 26.—Under the title, "Studies of the Codling Moth in the Central Appalachian Region," entomological specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture have reported the results of investigations of this apple destroying insect carried on since 1911 in Virginia, West Virginia, and Maryland. The studies were conducted principally at Charlottesville, Fishersville, Greenwood and Winchester, Va.; Keyser, French creek and Pickens, W. Va.; and Hagerstown, Smithsburg and Hancock, Md.

The purpose of the study was to determine the breeding habits of these enemies to the apple industry, which have developed recently throughout the Central Appalachian section to an extent which makes its control of increasing importance. The investigators gave special attention to determining the breeding habits of the pest and to discovering the effect of elevation and temperature on its control. They also made a special study of natural enemies which in this region tend to reduce the number of larvae.

The results of their study are reported in Bulletin No. 189, which contains 49 pages and a number of diagrams and illustrations. By putting bladders around many unsprayed apple trees over 20,000 specimens of larvae were collected and placed in containers so that habits could be studied.

Following is a partial summary of the results obtained:

During a single year the codling moth, in the region covered by the present studies, produces one full brood of larvae and a partial second brood, the size of the second brood depending more or less on the latitude and altitude of the locality.

The studies show a marked difference in the time of appearance of the different broods in different localities. Charlottesville gave the earliest records for practically all broods and Pickens the latest. There seems, however, to be no constant rate of difference between the earlier and later localities. This seems to be largely due to the responsiveness of the species during its metamorphic changes to local and transient weather conditions.

During the time of the investigation the first-brood larvae began entering the fruit at Charlottesville from April 28 to May 15, and second-brood larvae from June 25 to July 1. At Pickens first-brood larvae began entering the fruit from June 20, to July 1, and second-brood larvae about August 10. Between these two localities there is a greater difference in the time of the regular periodical changes of the insect that occur late in the season than of those that occur early in the season. This is probably due to the cumulative retarding effect of the more frequent unfavorable weather conditions at the higher point.

Records of the numbers of larvae collected from trees on which bands were placed around the trunks and also around the bases of the larger branches indicate that 41.49 per cent. drop to the ground and then ascend the trunk to pupate and 58.51 per cent. crawl down the branches from the infested fruit to pupate.

Two specimens of ants (Solenopsis molesta Say and Lasius niger L. var. americanus Emery) were found in several localities devouring codling-moth larvae. Larvae and adults of the bees, the Tenobroides corticalis Melsh, were found frequently feeding on codling-moth larvae and pupae. Six species of hymenopterous and one of dipterous parasites were reared in the jars. Of these the most destructive to the codling moth were Asogaster carpopapse, Vier, and Ictoplectis marginatus Prov. Hairworm parasites (Mermis sp.) were abundant in one locality and very materially reduced the number of wintering larvae in the year 1911.

South Bethlehem, Pa., March 26.—Feeling severe abdominal pains, John S. Clumer, a farmer, of Quakertown, hurried to a physician, fearing appendicitis, but the doctor extracted a needle from under the skin. Then Clumer remembered that he stepped on the needle about 10 years ago.

Hardly Worth Mentioning

As a New Orleans hotel keeper tells the tale a ninety-year-old negro man who was homeless, penniless, infirm and crippled crawled into hayloft in a strange neighborhood to spend his last hours. The darky who owned the hay saw a suspicious figure slinking into his stable and came with his shotgun to make the intruder a prisoner. Cautiously entering the stable, he detected a rustling in the hay and, aiming his gun in the direction whence the sound came, yelled out: "I got you! Doggone you, I got you!"
The expiring wanderer raised his head and as he gazed down the gun barrels replied wistfully: "An 'a great git you got!"—Saturday Evening Post.

WANTED: 50 MEN AND WOMEN

To Take Advantage of Special Offer Made by H. C. Kennedy

H. C. Kennedy, the enterprising druggist, is advertising to-day for fifty men and women to take advantage of the special half-price offer he is making on Dr. Howard's celebrated remedy for constipation and dyspepsia, and get a fifty-cent package at half price, 25 cents.
This is an unusual opportunity to obtain 60 doses of the best medicine ever made for half its regular price, with the personal guarantee of a well-known business man to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.
If you cannot call at H. C. Kennedy's store to-day, send him 25 cents by mail and he will send you a package promptly, charges paid.
H. C. Kennedy has been able to secure only a limited supply of the remedy, so great is the demand, and you should not delay taking advantage of this liberal offer he is making this week.—Adv.

Hereafter the basis of adjustment will be:

In Ford sizes, plain tread, 6,000 miles; Kant Slip, 7,500 miles. All other sizes, plain tread, 5,000 miles; Kant Slip tread, 6,000 miles.

The word "adjust" is merely figurative, because in 1914 the total adjustment in Kelly-Springfield Tires for the whole United States was less than 1%.

You get this unequalled service in uninterrupted mileage—not adjustment.

Before buying some other tire at a lower price analyze the basis of adjustment offered by the other maker—see what you really do get for less money.

Philadelphia, March 26.—A prisoner being escorted to the Belgrade and Clearfield streets police station by two detectives last night struck his captors into permitting him a moment's freedom, and drew an automatic revolver, with which he sent three bullets into the heart of one of the detectives, killing him instantly, and mortally wounded the other. The murderer made good his escape, but the entire police department is covering every exit from the city.

The dying man is Harry Tucker, 42 years old, 5739 Woodland avenue, father of seven children.

Bergdoll, widow of a wealthy brewer, at Fifty-second and Wynnefield avenue, taking with him, it is alleged, $2,000 worth of jewelry and two automatic revolvers.

With one of these weapons, the police assert, he shot the detectives.

Julius F. Smietunka, collector of internal revenue, estimates that $15,000,000 in salaries is escaping the tax. The collector said that twelve deputies have been assigned to make a house-to-house canvass to determine the delinquents.

OFFERS $1,000 FOR ORCHID

Anonymous Bidder Seeks to Buy Red Cross Fund's Flower

New York, March 26.—An offer of $1,000 has been made for "Queen of the Belgians," the new orchid which was given to the American Red Cross for its Belgian Relief Fund. Managers of the fund said the bidder preferred that his name be withheld. There have been half a dozen lower bids.
As new varieties of orchids often bring thousands of dollars, this specimen is kept in a locked glass case. There is less fear of losing the blossom by theft than that some enthusiast may tap its pollen, for the purpose of hybridization. A toothpick or hatpin in the hands of a skilled manipulator could draw away enough pollen to propagate a new orchid. The name of this variety is Cattleya Schroederae.

Britain's Greatest Precipice

The wild fowls of St. Kilda find nesting places that enable them to bid defiance to the sportsman and to the most daring of bird catchers. There is, for example, the precipice called Conagher, the same being far and away the greatest precipice in the British Isles, the deepest perpendicular precipice. It rises from the sea level to a clear height of 1,220 feet. Consider that a man might jump from the top of Conagher into the sea without getting a scratch by the way.—London Graphic.
