CATTLE PLAGUE WIPED OUT

124,141 Animals Have Been Slaughtered, but That Does Not Cover the Total Loss

Washington, April 2.—Practical eradication of the foot and mouth scourge disease of live stock in the United States was announced last night by the Department of Agriculture.

Officers in charge of the campaign waged against the plague said that, with the single exception of a herd of animals near Syracuse, N. Y., which had been designated for slaughter yesterday, telegraphic reports from the inspectors throughout the country showed that the disease had been, to the best of their knowledge, wiped out.

Figures compiled by the department show that 124,141 animals have been slaughtered because of the foot and mouth infection from the time of the outbreak in October to March 25, last.

It was pointed out that the total loss caused by the disease could not be estimated alone by the number of animals killed. Interference with the operations of the stock yards at Chicago and other shipping points, the quarantining of infected regions in practically all of the cattle-raising States and other precautionary measures ordered by the department to prevent the spread of the disease during its worst stages, it was said, had caused indeterminate losses.

Only a few infected herds have been reported since March 25, and it was said all these had been slaughtered. There is little probability of future trouble from the disease, the department declares.

BIG BOA ON MODERN ARK

Old Tom Trapped Dining on Two Portions of Bird

New York, April 2.—The steamer Terence, from South America, reached Farham street, Brooklyn, last night with an old-time cargo of snakes, monkeys and other tropical creatures.

Old Tom, the biggest true boa, broke out of his box on the South Carolina coast and hustled for the engine room gratings. On his way he fell in with a crate of parrots, according to Custodian Ferdinand Bartels, and broached the box. When Old Tom was overhauled he was seething two parquets at once, and seemed to be relishing them. He was caught with a crocheted stick and soon was put back into his crate.

Bartels fell ill with jungle fever in Brazil. After the natives cured him they guided him to the animals and he got everything he wanted—twenty boas, boxes of smaller serpents, a grove

HEAVY BORING AND TURNING LATHE IN THE WITKOWITZ WORKS

LOCATION OF LARGEST WAR MUNITION PLANTS AND STRATEGIC RAILROADS IN HUNGARY, ALSO SECTION OF ITALIAN BORDER WHERE TROOPS ARE BEING MASSED

The Russian advance across the Carpathian Mountains is large in possibilities for the upkeep of the Russian army. Enormous iron and steel works devoted to the manufacture of great guns and war material lie within grasp of the forces of the Tsar once the plains of Hungary are reached.

Budapest within recent years has attained to an importance in machinery construction ahead of any city in the Austro-Hungarian kingdom. The Ganz works, one of the first electrical works in Europe, are located there. So also are the Lang works, the Budapest locomotive works, the Vulcan works, the State Railway locomotive works, and a branch of the Resicza works, while not far from Budapest, lying to the north and east of the city, are the Hungarian small arms works.

All of the above plants are engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war and artillery equipment, and in addition are turning out every conceivable form of electrical supplies, railway material and bridge equipment.

Just across the Hungarian frontier, in Northeastern Moravia, are the great Witkowitz works, which in importance rank almost as great as the Krupp works of Germany. At Resicza and Witkowitz the heavy gun forgings for the Austrian artillery are produced and all the armor plate for the Austrian war ships comes from these works. Witkowitz employs during normal times of peace fully 28,000 men, and Resicza normally carries on its pay rolls 7,000 men.

The Russians are now on the two main lines of railways leading toward Budapest. The Eastern army is on the Stry-Miskolcs line, the direct route from Eastern Silesia to the Hungarian capital, and the western Russian army has reached Bartfeld on the Hungarian side of the Carpathians. Bartfeld connects by rail with Eperies, and
