PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hemerchage.

Don't neglect a hemorrhage.

No matter what its source may be or what the amount, it should receive the attention of a physician. A simple nosebleed may lead to trouble. Spitting blood, even if not more than a teaspoonful, may indicate the beginning of disease of the lungs. Even if the immediate results are slight, the later ones may be serious in the way of debility, etc.

To cope with this danger the guns have to be cunningly hidden from aerial observation by means of crests of leafage, trees and in many instances draped over with foliage precisely 4n harmony with the color of the immediate surroundings.

A good artillery officer can control his battery much like a fireman does his hose. Although his guns are hidden, he himself must be in a position overlooking the field of action in order to be able to give instructions to his guns, etc. If he is obliged to travel away from his guns his information is transmitted either by means of telephones, signals or a chain of orderlies.

THE TURKISH BABY.

Odd Custems Attend Upon His Birth and His First Bath.

A Turkish baby looks very queer in his odd dress. He wears over his shirt a kind of padded gown, something like a bathrobe, and on his little head he wears a bright red silk cap with tassel of seed pearls. To keep all evil away from the baby one or more charms are fastened to the tassel.

after they are straightened out by his nurse, and when he is all fixed he is put in a little bed and covered with several warm pads. In addition to this a thin red veil is put over all.

When he is all ready his father comes in to see him for the first time. If the child is a boy, the father is doubly pleased. He takes the child up very tenderly in his arms and carries him out of the room. Just outside the door he rests a minute and prays. After he prays three times he repeats the name chosen for the baby and this is the way the baby is christened.

When the child is three days old a celebration is held and old women who make a regular business of this go to the different houses inviting the ladies to the party. At each house they tell the day of his birth and the name of the baby and urge the people to come.
On the day of celebration the people arrive from early in the morning until late in the afternoon. Nearly all bring presents for the baby's mother, and each person as she gives her present to the mother expresses a pleasant wish for the child. They hardly notice the baby, for the mother is afraid of bad luck if too much attention is paid to it. The few who do look at him say how ugly he is or something like that and this delights the mother, who knows they do not mean what they say.

If the parents are rich sweet sherbet or coffee and candies, cakes and ices are served as refreshments. If they are poor coffee and fruits are offered. but the entertainment is much the same. The ladies talk and laugh and first bath. This happens when he is eight days old, and his mother and her friends may have a bath, too, if they wish. The baby bathes first, then his mother and then the visitors. This bath takes a long time and all the time slaves play sweet music and food is served three or four times.—Portland Oregonian.

Surety Losses - - Normal and Abnormal Insurance Underwriters are always dealing with the darker side of things—with death, disease, shippreek, fire, tornado, casuality, accident, breakage, leakage, explosion, calamity, failure, debt default disaster and dishonesty. The conditions of their business require that they shall confront and survive all these things. Were they to live during suashine and pleasant weather only their lives would, indeed, be short but their insurance would be proportionately valueless. They have entered a business where they undertake to meet the losses due to untoward events. To live long they must survive disaster. It is not sufficient that they shall be able to pay what may be called normal or expected losses. They MUST BE ABLE TO PAY THE ABRORMAL AND UNEXPECTED LOSSES, Protection against the normal and expected is necessary, but insurance was especially called into being to provide protection against the abnormal and unexpected.
