Sweet Red Peppers or Canned Pimentos

The sweet red pepper is one of the greatest helps that housekeepers have when they want to give a variety in the serving of vegetables or a fancy touch to a meal.

The bright red color and the piquancy of the vegetable change the character of every other food they are added to. If you have not formed the habit of using peppers try some of the following suggestions, but please be sure you use the sweet variety of the pepper family, for the peppery pepper is too hot for our palates.

One pleasing combination is cauliflower and red pepper salad. Blanch and cook the cauliflower; it should be of ivory whiteness when finished. Break into neat bits and chill. Remove the tops from the peppers as well as all the white-fibre lining. If you like them most and John Williams, Green Ridge, were caught behind a rush of coal at the Green Ridge colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. Rescuers lar now because the tips are just in season. The coarser part of the asparagus may be used in cream of asparagus soup, though so early in the month the entire stalk should be delightfully tender.

Cook the asparagus as usual and dress with well seasoned cream sauce made a trifle thicker than is usual. Heat the peppers in boiling water and serve the asparagus in them. If you prefer you may chill the vegetables and masquerade the asparagus in mayonnaise and serve as a salad, but it is fine when prepared as directed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

"Please tell me where I can find liquid wall plaster and is it already mixed?"
Reply.—This is a dry powder and only requires the addition of water. It comes in all colors and may be had, under many names, at any paint store.

"Kindly tell me price of tubes for piping frostings and where to buy them?"
Reply.—These tubes sell at about ten cents each in any household furnishings store. You can make a very good pastry tube by folding heavy white paper into a cornucopia and snipping off the pointed end. Press the mixture through this little hole and, after some practice, you will become quite deft.

"Can you suggest anything that will take spots from a mirror, also how shall I dye a woolen dress?—B. R. G."
Reply.—If the discolorations on the mirror are on the under side you must have it resilvered; if on the outer side rub with silver polish and then wash gently and polish. You can use any commercial dye for coloring the dress and if you follow the directions you will have success.

To-morrow—Broiled Ham.

Clear Your Skin

Eczema, psoriasis, ring worm, pimples, scales and crusts are due to myriad deeply buried germs in the skin. To secure relief and cure these germs must be destroyed and eliminated.

The D. D. D. Prescription, a mild compound in liquid form of oil of wintergreen, thymol and other deodorizing elements, will give instant relief in all cases. Unlike salves, it penetrates to the deeply buried germs, kills and washes them out.

All druggists have D. D. D. A generous trial bottle for use. Come in and let us tell you about our money back guarantee offer on a full size bottle. Ask also about D. D. Soap.

AMENDS DIVORCE ACTION

Niece of Mrs. Robert N. Carson Alleges Husband Was Cruel

Lancaster, Pa., April 27.—A case that created a sensation in Philadelphia a year ago came up again yesterday in the divorce suit of Margaret Dobbins against Bernard A. Dobbins.

The plaintiff is a niece of the late Fanny Carson, widow of Robert N. Carson, a wealthy Philadelphian. Yesterday's testimony was that she left her home because her husband did not provide properly for herself and children.

When counsel for Dobbins moved for a non-suit on the ground that Mrs. Dobbins left without justification, her counsel amended the libel in divorce by adding to the desertion cause that of cruel treatment. The defendant pleaded surprise, and the case was continued.

State Rifle Range Soon Will Have Abundant Water Supply

Mt. Gretna, Pa., April 27.—The contract for the construction of the new 150,000 gallon water reservoir on the State rifle range reservation was awarded yesterday to Emanuel Keener, of Colebrook. The reservoir will give Mt. Gretna four times its present water supply, the old dam having a capacity of 50,000.

A second contract was awarded to David Risser, of Lebanon, for the clearing of forty acres of timber land, in preparation for the next guard encampment.

BRIDE-ELECT CHANGES MIND

Young Woman Decides Not to Wed as She Reaches Minister's House

Reading, Pa., April 27.—With the stage all set for a wedding before the Rev. J. Franklin Cropp, here yesterday, the bride-to-be, Miss Ethel M. Border, of Oak Brook, balked when she reached the parsonage with her intended husband, Robert H. Marquette, of West Reading.

Parental objection is said to have kept the couple apart some time ago, but Miss Border became of age a week ago. A license was granted yesterday and all arrangements were made for the wedding. At the last moment Miss Border decided not to be married.

CONVICT DIES OF WOUNDS

Montgomery, Ala., April 27.—County officials are investigating the death of James Lee, a negro convict, who had been leased by the city to a plantation owner.

Fellow convicts have testified that Lee was beaten for an hour by an overseer, who used a strap four inches wide studded with tacks. Physicians have testified Lee's wounds caused his death.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers—Meat Forms Uric Acid

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

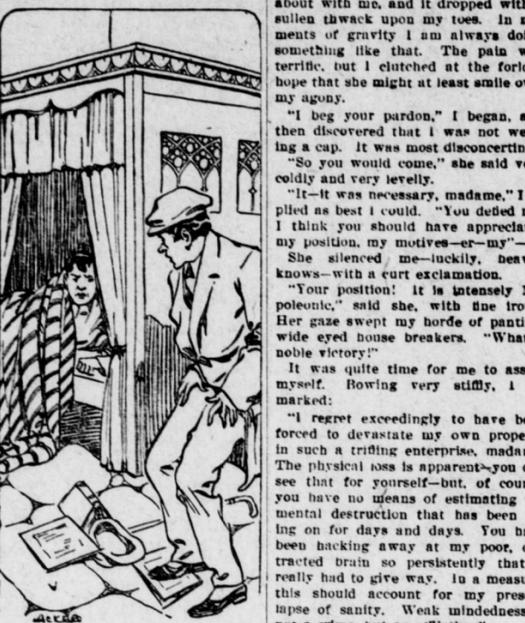

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

"Please do not handle the bedspreads and curtains. They will fall to pieces"—I heard no more, for the vanguard had pushed him aside and was swooping down upon me. A sharp nosed man led the way. He was within three feet of the bed and was stretching out his hand to touch the proscribed fabrics when I sat bolt upright and yelled: "Get out!"

"Get out!"
Afterward I was told that the guide was the first to reach the bottom of the stairs and that he narrowly escaped death in the avalanche of horrified humanity that piled after him, pursued by the puissant ghost of a six-year-old ancestor.

CHAPTER VII.
I met the foe and fall.

THE post that morning, besides containing a telegram from Vienna apprising me of the immediate embarkation of four irreproachable angels in the guise of servants, brought a letter from my friends the Hazzards, inquiring when my castle would be in shape to receive and discharge house parties without subjecting them to an intermediate season of peril from drafts, leaky roofs, damp sheets and vampires.

I sat down and looked about me in gloomy despair. No words can describe the scene, unless we devote a whole page to repeating the word "dismal." Morning in the midst of repairs is an awful thing. I looked, despaired and then dictated a letter to the Hazzards, urging them to come at once with all their friends!

I needed some one to make me forget.

At 11 o'clock Poopendyke brought me a note from the chateaufort of the east wing. It had been dropped into the courtyard from one of the upper windows. The reading of it transformed me into a stern, relentless demon. She very calmly announced that she had a headache and couldn't think of being disturbed that day and probably not the next.

My mind was made up in an instant. I would not be put off by a headache—which was doubtless assumed for the occasion—and I would be master of my castle or know the reason why, etc.

In the courtyard I found a score or more of idle artisans, banished by the onswearing tourists and completely forgotten by me in the excitement of the hour. Commanding them to fetch their files, saws, broadaxes and augers, I led the way to the mighty doors that barred my entrance to the other side. I stood over my tolling minions, and I venture to say that they never worked harder or faster in their lives. By 12 o'clock we had the great doors open and swept on to the next obstruction.

At 2 o'clock the last door in the east antechamber gave way before our resolute advance, and I stood victorious and dusty in the little recess at the top of the last stairway. Beyond the twentieth century portieres of a thirteenth century doorway lay the goal we sought. I hesitated briefly before drawing them apart and taking the final plunge. As a matter of fact, I was beginning to feel ashamed of myself. Suppose that she really had a headache? What an uncouth, pusillanimous brute I—

Just then, even as my hand fell upon the curtains, they were snatched aside, and I found myself staring into the vivid, uplifted face of the lady who had defied me and would continue to do so if my suddenly active perceptions counted for anything.

I saw nothing but the dark, indignant, imperious eyes. They fairly withered me.

In some haste, attended by the most disheartening nervousness, I tried to find my cap to remove it in the presence of royalty. Unfortunately I was obliged to release the somewhat cumbersome crowsbar I had been carrying about with me, and it dropped with a sudden thwack upon my toes. In moments of gravity I am always doing something like that. The pain was terrific, but I clutched at the forlorn hope that she might at least smile over my agony.

"I beg your pardon," I began, and then discovered that I was not wearing a cap. It was most disconcerting. "So you would come," she said very coldly and very levelly.

"It—it was necessary, madame," I replied as best I could. "You defied me, I think you should have appreciated my position, my motives—er—my—"

She silenced me—luckily, heaven knows—with a curt exclamation.

"Your position! It is intensely Napoleonic," said she, with the irony. Her gaze swept my horde of panting, wide eyed house breakers. "What a noble victory!"

It was quite time for me to assert myself. Bowing very stiffly, I remarked: "I regret exceedingly to have been forced to devastate my own property in such a trifling enterprise, madame. The physical loss is apparent—you can see that for yourself—but, of course, you have no means of estimating the mental destruction that has been going on for days and days. You have been backing away at my poor, distracted brain so persistently that it really had to give way. In a measure, this should account for my present lapse of sanity. Weak-mindedness is not a crime, but an affliction."

She did not smile.

"Well, now that you are here, Mr. Smart, may I be so bold as to inquire what you are going to do about it?" I reflected. "I think, if you don't mind, I'll come in and sit down. That was a deuce of a rap I got across the toes. I am sure to be a great deal more lenient and agreeable if I'm asked to come in and see you. Incidentally I thought I'd step up to inquire how your headache is getting on. Better, I hope?"

bleak, sinister, weather racked castle in which I was striving so hard to find a comfortable corner? "Well?" she demanded relentlessly.

"By the Lord Harry!" I began, finding my tongue only to lose it again. The room was completely furnished, bedecked and rendered habitable by a hundred and one articles that were mysteriously missing from my side of the castle. Rugs, tapestries, curtains of the rarest quality; chairs, couches and cushions; tables, cabinets and chests that would have canted the eyes of the most conservative collector of antique to bulge with—not wonder, but greed; stands, pedestals, brasses, bronzes, porcelain—but why enumerate? On the massive oaken center table stood the priceless silver vase we had missed on the second day of our occupancy, and it was filled with fresh yellow roses.

And so complete had been the rifling of my rooms by the devoted vandals in their efforts to make this lady cozy and comfortable that they did not overlook a silver framed photograph of my dear mother.

THE USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary sulfated coconut oil; (which is pure and greaseless) is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get sulfated coconut oil (it must be sulfated, plain coconut oil will not do) at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every one in the family for months.

WRECK DISMEMBERS HIM

Man Is Torn to Pieces As Missiles Fly From Mill

Bloomsburg, April 27.—The body of Henry Heid, aged 40, of Fishing Creek township, was torn to pieces yesterday when a nut fell off a chopping mill and into the cog wheels and pieces of the mill flew in all directions.

Heid was in the path of some of the pieces and the upper part of his body was shockingly mangled, and he suffered several fractures of the skull and lived only a few minutes. His brother, George Heid, standing on the other side of the mill, was only slightly hurt.

So great was the force of the flying iron that part of the building was torn down.
