GOVERNOR WINS CHILD BILL TILT

Succeeds in Having Measure Reported in the Senate in Its Original Form

THE EFFORT TO AMEND FAILS

Suppressed Excitement Prevails During Whole Evening Session of the Upper Branch While the Legislative Leaders Spar for Advantage

Despite the efforts of Senator Snyder, of Schuylkill, to prevent a meeting of the Judiciary Special Committee of the Senate last night, in order that no action might be taken on the child labor bill, the committee held a meeting and ordered the bill reported exactly as it came from the House. This was just what Governor Brumbaugh desired and what had been promised to him at a conference in the executive chamber last week by Senators McNichol and Vare, although Senator Snyder, it is understood, opposed that particular action.

It was the sensation of the evening's session,—this reporting out of the bill,—and for three hours the Senate chamber was charged with electricity, and yet to the casual observer nothing out of the ordinary was taking place, so quietly was everything being done.

When the committee failed to order the bill out last Wednesday night, it was understood that a meeting would be held last night to take action, and Governor Brumbaugh insisted that this action be decisive. Senators McNichol and Vare arrived here last evening and went direct to the executive mansion. After consultation with the Governor they went to the Senate chamber and asked Snyder to get his committee together. Snyder, however, declined on the ground that Senator Crow was not here and had requested a postponement of the meeting until this morning. McNichol and Vare declined to have it that way, and McNichol drew up a call for a meeting of the committee which he had signed by nine members, or a majority.

It was 11 o'clock when the committee got together, and within half an hour of midnight when it opened the doors, and came forth with the announcement that it had been agreed to report the bill "as committed," meaning as it was sent to committee.

Snyder was expected to make a statement when he reported the bill, but he said nothing. It is said, however, that an attempt will be made to amend the bill when it comes up on second reading to-morrow morning. The action last night was regarded as a decided victory for Governor Brumbaugh.

Warden McKenty was here working for the defeat of the bill, but the votes of the Allegheny delegation put the measure over.

The House last night, by a vote of 123 to 62, passed the Hess bill to consolidate the Eastern and Western penitentiaries on the site of the new penitentiary in Centre county. It would take years to effect the removal and no appropriation is carried in the measure. The bills now goes to the Senate.

The Harper bill amending the public service act of 1913 to permit appeals in grade crossing cases was defeated. The House also defeated the Roney bill removing the exemption tax from mutual life insurance companies. The Cox bill regulating the business of making small loans was passed. It provides that loan agents obtain a license from the State Banking Commissioner. Other bills passed were: Senate bill, regulating practice of veterinary medicine, surgery and dentistry. Senate bill, fixing salaries of probation officers of Philadelphia municipal court. Requiring use of legal names in assessments of voters, etc. Providing that dog at large in sheep fields may be killed.

took place when the bill to compel sellers of dressed meats and meat products to keep their wares covered so that neither insects nor dirt could contaminate them, came up, but the bill passed finally by 27 yeas to 10 nays.

The Senate concurred in the House resolution asking the Republican National committee to select Philadelphia as the place for holding the next National Republican convention.

Stern movie bill goes over. The Stern moving picture censorship bill, which reduces the cost of censoring pictures to fifty cents, was made a special order of business for next Monday night, at the House session last night. Action was postponed for one week when the bill came up on special order of business for final passage.

Gratz Water Company for the supply of water to the public in Gratz borough, Dauphin county.
