During the reception Miss Eleanor Walters and Mr. Brasselman gave an exhibition of modern dances, including the Pavlowa waltz, the maxixe whirl and others.

Prominent men and women of the city acted as patrons and patronesses and received the guests from 8 until 9:30, followed by dancing from 9:30 until 1 o'clock.

ALBERT KELSEY LECTURES ON "TROPICAL MEXICO" Speaker, Introduced by Governor Brumbaugh, Gave an Interesting Talk Illustrated by Lantern Slides—Arranged by Pure Milk Society

A most successful benefit entertainment was given last evening when Albert Kelsey, a well known architect of Philadelphia, gave an interesting lecture on "Tropical Mexico" in Fabnestock Hall.

Mr. Kelsey, who lectured under the auspices of the Pure Milk Society, talked of Mexican tribes, from the ancient Aztecs to the modern Pueblos, describing their customs and telling absorbing tales of their peculiar traditions, illustrating his talk with beautiful lantern slides. As a background for the speaker, the stage was artistically decorated with blankets, earthenware, curious woven hammocks with Indian mother rocks her baby to sleep, articles of wearing apparel, such as sandals and queer looking hats. A three hundred year old incense burner taken from the well of an ancient temple gave a real local color touch and added to the interest of the lecture.

The names of more than one hundred prominent men and women of the city were on the list of patrons and patronesses and Governor Brumbaugh who worked in the interest of pure milk in Philadelphia, introduced Mr. Kelsey to the audience.

The committee in charge of the benefit lecture included: Mrs. Francis Jordan Hall, Miss Anne McCormick, Mrs. Marlin E. Olmstead, Mrs. William E. MAY DAY FETE HELD Members of Junior Aid Society Arranged a Benefit Entertainment Which Was Given on Lawn

A real "in the good old summer time" hurdy-gurdy furnished the music for the Maypole dance which was one of the features of the May Day Fete held this afternoon on the lawn adjoining the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Payne, North Front street.

The Maypole dance was only one of the many interesting features of the affair for there were tables and booths of every description presided over by little misses in white who sold delicious home made candies, cakes, ice cream and novelties of various kind. The fete was held by the younger members of the Junior Aid Society, a band of little girls who have worked indefatigably all through the winter doing everything in their power for the children of the city who are in need of financial and medical aid. More than one hundred and twenty-five dollars has been collected and earned by this little band of workers who are children ranging in age from 8 to 12 years. Stockings were filled at Christmas, baskets and flowers given on Easter time and dozens of pretty scrap books made and given to the little invalids in whom the band is interested. The proceeds of the fete will be added to the fund and plans discussed later for the work of the next winter.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR VODKA Furniture Polish, Shellac, Black Bread, Wood Alcohol and Onions

New York, May 1.—Recipe for a "Petrograd paralyzer." To one bottle of furniture polish add a little salt. When the shellac has risen to the surface strain the mixture through a piece of black bread. Add an equal quantity of wood alcohol. Flavor with onions to taste.

Take one gulp of this and you pass into a state of catatony for forty-eight hours. When you awake, take a drink of water, and you pass instantly into another trance, this time for twenty-four hours only. On awakening a second time, a second drink of water will put you away for twelve hours more.

This, according to G. W. A. Woodhouse, former attaché to the British embassy at Petrograd, who is now at the Waldorf, is the nature of a substitute for vodka now being used by some of the lower class natives of the larger Russian cities since the czar's prohibition order.
