ANOTHER ALLIANCE FOR TURKEY

The end of alliances of nations is not yet. It seems to be as much the proper thing these days for governments to enter into so-called binding agreements with one another as it is for them to enter into serious disagreements. They make friends and make enemies simultaneously. Reports now are that there is to be a Turkish-Persian-Afghan alliance. This project is the latest thing, unless there is news now on the way concerning more recent flirtations among the nations.

It appears that Turkey wants to increase her power by entering into agreements with Persia and Afghanistan, Moslem countries with which Turkey already is connected by racial and religious ties. By entering into such an alliance, Turkey plans to be the common member of a European triple alliance and of an Asiatic triple alliance: German-Austrian-Turkish and Turkish-Persian-Afghan.

This plan is based on the assumption that Turkey is to continue to be a part of Europe, that it is to have alliances and interests in Eastern Europe as well as in Western Asia after terms of peace have been made. Turkey of course has as much right at present to go on such an assumption as have the Allies to presume that the disposition of Constantinople will be up to them when final negotiations are made at the close of the war. It may not be safe, however, for Ottoman empire to base too many hopes on retaining her foothold in Europe.

Should the Turks be driven back into Asia, where they came from they would no doubt find an alliance with Persia and Afghanistan not without advantages. About them are enterprising and aggressive Greeks, turbulent and uncontrollable Arabs of the peninsula, independent Syrians and Mesopotamians, defiant Armenians and roving Bedouins and Kurds. They will need the assistance of friendly Asiatic neighbors, no matter what may be their fate at the close of the war.

THE MAN WHO MAKES THE HOLLER

Too much investigating, too much unwarranted prying into other's affairs, too much "knocking" or fault-finding without justification, have caused more trouble in this country in the last 12 or 15 years than anything else we know of. The period, -which happily appears now to some extent to be passing,-in which disgruntled persons or political jingoes attacked everybody and everything just because it was the fad because it brought them into the newspapers or gained for them some political advantage, did more harm to business institutions and consequently to the prosperity of this nation than any other single influence. There isn't any denying it that the "investigating" fad has been directly responsible for much of the handicaps to industry and commerce,-causing what President Wilson so aptly termed "psychological depression,"-which appeared a number of years before the Wilson administration took hold of things and which continued to some extent after President Wilson went to the White House.

We do not mean to take the ground that, because a lot of needless investigating has done a whole lot of harm in retarding business, business or anything else of a public or semi-public nature should be permitted to go ahead and do as it darn pleases on the Star Chamber plan behind closed doors where it would be immune to all public regulation and the exercise of corrective measures. Far from it. Business ought to be done on a wide open basis and the offending business men ought to be punished when it goes wrong, but all business should not be harassed and probed and reprobed and interfered with without cause just because some disgruntled person or some person with a selfish motive has the investigating germ in his system.

What there ought to be is a method of determining whether all the things that off and on are said against business are worthy of investigation before investigation is started. Perhaps the best way of going about that is suggested by an Illinois editor who would "investigate the man who makes the holler."

That is just the thing. Investigate the "man who makes the holler" before you take seriously what he is hollering about. If you find that he is seeking the limelight or political capital or blackmail or is prompted by some other purely selfish or despicable purpose, you can safely let his 'holler'' drop right there! In most cases it will be easy to learn what is behind the "holler."

HEALTH LOST IN THE COUNTRY TOO

Contrary to common beliefs, figures have shown that the death-rate in cities can be lower than the death-rate in the country districts; that crowded communities may be more healthful places than rural sections.

New York City is congratulating itself, for instance, because for several years its residents have stood better chances of surviving longer than have the dwellers in the country districts of the state. This even though in the city there are many hospital patients who do not return alive to their various homes, many victims of accidents in industrial establishments, many infants who shortly after helping to establish the city's very high birth-rate aid in increasing its death-rate and many aliens who are in ignorance of the laws of health. New of the Senators was reading a letter he York City can afford to direct the attention of the State Health Department to the country districts for a while.

Conditions are improving gradually on the farms, although everything is not yet as sanitary as might be desired. The old oaken bucket may be very picturesque and the newly drawn well water very refreshing, but there may be typhoid concealed in the cooling draughts. The stable, too, may have its attractive scenes, and the habits of animal life may be interesting to observe, but the nearness of the stable to the farm house is not always without ill effects on the occupants of the latter.

The custom of many city dwellers has been to go to the country for their vacations, or for part of their vacations, when the time comes around for their annual escapes from daily duties. It is a good custom, no doubt a healthful one. The change a is desirable. The fresh air of the open country is tained enough pledges to pass his bill invigorating and the quiet of the lonesome fields and feeling pretty good over his sucsoothing. Yet that is only during the diversion of a few weeks. Health is lost in the country as well as found. The permanent residents of the rural districts numerously go to increase the country death-rate when disease comes, despite the fresh air and the peace and the quiet.

Governor Brumbaugh, evidently, is not the kind to stay.

The Legislature is passing bills even faster than Governor Brumbaugh can veto them.

Naturally those who are boosting the war stocks are taking no stock in the peace rumors.

The man who rides in his own $5,000 touring car is full When the bill in which the lobbyist of woe because so many non-discriminating persons think he is patronizing a jitney bus.

LOSS OF APPETITE

Most Successfully Treated by Taking

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Loss of appetite is accompanied by loss of vitality, which is serious.

It is common in the spring because at this time the blood is impure and impoverished and fails to give the digestive organs what is absolutely necessary for the proper performance of their functions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old reliable all-the-year-round medicines, is especially useful in the spring. Get it from your druggist to-day. By purifying and enriching the blood and giving vitality, vigor and tone, it is wonderfully successful in the treatment of loss of appetite and the other ailments prevalent at this time. It is not simply a spring medicine—it is much more than that—but it is the best spring medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the rich red blood the digestive organs need.—Adv.

Tongue-End Topics

A cablegram printed in the New York "Sun" on Sunday from Paris, said that for the first time in its history the Luxembourg Palace, where the French Senate holds its session, was invaded the other day by a slangy ex-pression. Then the "Sun" says that he venerable Senators broke out into applause on hearing it, to the amazement of those who thought slang was incomprehensible to the grave statesnen of the French upper house. One had received from a French soldier in the trenches regarding the difficulty in attracting attention by some brave act n order to have conferred the new French military decoration, the Cross of War. The soldier wrote that when wholesale commendation is made of a company, nobody is named particularly. and a soldier finds himself "in the soup. Originated in the House Here And that was the slang expression that, originating in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives years ago, had gradually worked its way to the French Senate. It was during the session of 1887 of the Pennsylvania Legislature that an important bill was being engineered through the House by a prominent lobbyist who had once been member of the House. He had obcess, the bill coming up on final passage the next day, he went off with a party of friends and celebrated. night long they celebrated in a Market street hotel, and about 9 o'clock the next morning the lobbyist perched himself on a stool at the lunch counter and called for soup.

Lobbyist Was "In the Soup"

When it was served him he was too sleepy to partake. His head fell forward and reposed in the dish of soup, his moustache falling gracefully the edges of the soup plate. And there he slept while his companions hurried to the House which met at 11 o'clock. was interested came up everybody looked around for its promoter, but he was nowhere to be seen. Loud calls were made for him, when Charlie Voorhees, who was at the clerk's desk, re-

He is down at the Blank hotel, in the soup."

And thus was born, with loud laugher, a slang expression that has gone all over the world and has at last reached the French Senate. It has taken almost thirty years for that slang praise to get around to Paris. There are men yet living in Harrisburg who can return the sound to Paris. There are men yet living in Harrisburg who can return to Shoop's church cemetery. yet living in Harrisburg who can

Senator Herbst's Devoted Wife will prevent Senator Edwin M. Herbst, of Berks, seeking re-election to the Senate. Just about two years ago. as the Legislature was about to adjourn finally, Senator Herbst sustained a stroke of paralysis that almost completely disabled him. He recovered somewhat after a while, but his power of speech was gone and, although he was cognizant of all that transpired about him, yet he could not express himself. During the present session he has been present at numerous meetings but beyond making a motion to adjourn or seconding a motion by the nodding of his head, he has taken no part in Senate business except to vote. Mrs. Herbst, his devoted wife, is with him constantly, at the capitol, and it is a touching sight to see the care she takes of him in the Senate. It is said day, says:

"The Austrian advance at Ciczkowice in the Carpathians, although checked, is deemed to be highly symptomatic. Ciczkowice is situated on the Donajec near Gorlice and Tarnow, on the roads from Tymbark to Cracow and the enemy's movements here are of no less importance than at Stry and other sections of our front.

"The Austrians have concentrated here very considerable and entirely fresh reinforcements from the interior. Their advance was facilitated by the open character of the Terrain which is admirably adapted to fighting. The enemy set himself the task not only of dislodging us from the line of the Donajec but of influencing our position on the lower Nida."

WHAT CONSTITUTES THE MAN?

BY WILLIAM H. KISTER

What constitutes the noble man And fitly measures life's brief span? A titled name? The breath of fame? Some creed believed Some deed achieved? The idle pomp of kingly power? The empty trappings of an hour?

Let those who prize the crowd's behest Stand slaves to folly's train confessed; Enjoy a day Of sordid sway, Or glory won On Marathon,

Or Burmah's gold with ease attained,

Or widened realms ignobly gained.

But grander far than power or pelf, The soul's dominion over self, The heart aglow For others' woe, The high-born thought, The grandly wrought Resolve attuned to exalted end.

These noble manhood e'er attend.
