Head of Telegraphers Defines Alleged Attitude of Big Railroad on Organized Labor

RECALLS GREAT STRIKE OF 1877

Tells Federal Industrial Relations Committee Giant Corporation Maintains a Gigantic Police and Spy System to Intimidate Its Employes

Washington, May 4.-The first of a series of public hearings to extend over a period of three weeks, into various industrial and labor conditions, was begun before the Federal Industrial Relations Commission to-day.

The inquiry opened with H. B. Perham, president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers as the first witness, to testify in connection with complaints by that organization against the Pennsylvania railroad. The Order of Railway Pelegraphers has not been recognized by the railroad company.

Perham submitted the complaint of his organization against the Pennsylva-Menace to Peace and Progress

Menace to Peace and Progress
"The present attitude of the Pennsylvania toward its employes and organized labor," said he, "constitutes a menace to the peace and progress of the people. From the time of the big Pennsylvania strike in 1877 to the present time, the officials of the Pennsylvania sylvania strike in 1877 to the present time, the officials of the Pennsylvania railroad have assumed an attitude of arrogance and harshness that leads to strike and that is inimical to the pub-lic welfare. The House also defeated, by a vote of 38 to 112, a bill which required the deposit of county funds, of counties of a population of 120,000, in banks where two per cent, interest would be given on daily balances. Mr. Habgood, of McKean, opposed the bill, saying that in small counties the small banks could not afford to pay such interest, and, under the mandatory provisions of the bill, the county treasurer would have no place to deposit the funds. An effort to amend the bill to include counties of a population up to 250,000 was defeated.

Final plans for this movement were approved at a conference held in Berlin April 23 between General Von Falkenhyn, chief of the German staff, and Field Marshal Conrad Von Hoetzendorf, chief of the Austrian staff.

It is too early to discuss the full military effect of this victory in Galicia, but it is the opinion of Austrian observers that the German and Austrian strategists "got the jump" on the offensive which the Russians were believed to be planning and of which their campaign in the Carpathians was thought to have been preliminary.

The number of prisoners taken by the Teutonic allies mentioned in the first report is noticeably small, but the experts here expect that the total number of men captured and the amount of war booty will grow rapidly.

All Work and No Play Produces the Fatigue That Poisons. Men and women come in the morn ing to their tasks with a spring fresh energy within them. little during the hours of labor they empty that spring. When it is dry they must draw from forces which should be untouched. By some strange chemistry which no one understands too well these intrusions on the physical forces which should be inviolate produce in the human system a true toxic condition—fatigue poison, auto poison the scientists call it.

If this fatigue poison passes a point where the period of rest following is not equal to the task of throwing it off and filling afresh the spring of energy, the man goes back to his toil a liftle unfit; the longer he goes on the more unfit he becomes. Slowly the poison invades his system. The repairing forces—food, relaxation, pleasures and sleep—become less and less equal to the task. The man becomes more and more open to the attack of disease; less and less able to do his work; un fit to improve upon it; unable to grow. He is an unsafe man, too, one not to be trusted among machines in dangerous places. The man has been poisoned into unfitness by the slow accumulation of fatigue poison which he could not throw off.

It was not work which did this. It was too much work. He needed the work to keep him fit. Without it or its equivalent, a regular physical exercise, his spring of energy would have as surely deteriorated as it did from overwould have soured within him .-
