"That is also difficult to answer,' replied Uncle Harry. "As I told you short time ago, boys, the Governments of the nations that are at war are very careful about all the war rs that is sent to America or any of the other countries. Consequently we have to take what news we can get and make the most of that."

"Then tell us what has happened since the war began and maybe that will give us some idea of where the two sides stand," said Jimmy. "Even that is a big day's work," the afternoon I have donned a pair of overalls and ridden the plows till sun-down. "What a great pity to see young men and young women marching to the city to be swallowed up with thousands of other pieces of human machinery as slaves to big business. There is no way of convincing those unfortunate human beings that they are wrong, until it is too late. A few months away from the old farm, where they do not hear the cowbells or see the great motion pic-ture of real life as pictured in the hun-dred and one things about the home, they fall eternal victims to false life, and are forever lost to farm life. "Most young people go to to wn with the idea of some day becoming well-to-do and retiring to the farm. I began business life with a policy to stay on the farm. I live on the farm the year round, and there'll be no retiring from the farm or to the farm. "Can every young man and woman do this? Not exactly. But those that cannot may remain on the farm and save themselves the cost of the awful experiment."
