WILSON REVIEWS A MIGHTY ARMADA

President's flag was to be the signal that the commander-in-chief of the fleet was ready to receive calls from its flag officers and captains. This ceremony completed, the Mayflower weighed anchor for the review. Her course was north between the battleships and the Manhattan shore. The Mayflower's escort was a division of destroyers, followed by the dispatch boat Dolphin, carrying Secretary Daniels, and by the fleet tender Yankton, the police boat Patrol and the auxiliary cruiser Dixie.

Sixteen Powerful Battleships
The fleet which President Wilson sees to-day for the first time in his official capacity comprises virtually the entire strength of the Atlantic naval force and is the backbone of a navy which at the outbreak of the European war stood second only to Great Britain's and Germany's. The cruiser division alone is not represented. Of the sixteen battleships, the superdreadnoughts New York and Texas and with their great 14-inch guns are rated the most powerful. The other units of the battle squadron in the order in which they were built are: Wyoming (fleet flagship), Utah, Florida, Delaware, North Dakota, Michigan, South Carolina, Kansas, New Hampshire, Louisiana, Virginia, Rhode Island, Nebraska and Georgia. Sixteen destroyers, twelve submarines, three monitors, mine-laying, repair, hospital, refrigerator and other auxiliary vessels compose the rest of the fleet.

Rain Spatters Natty Uniforms
A sharp rain spattered the natty uniforms of the sailors with mud as they swung into parade formation shortly after 10 o'clock and headed north on Fifth avenue for the reviewing stand in front of the Library, between Forty-first and Forty-second streets. Soon after they started the rain changed again to a drizzle. A solid wall of umbrellas, dripping rivulets of water, sheltered the thousands who had come to see and cheer along the line of march.

President Wilson left the Mayflower in a launch and came ashore at the foot of West Forty-first street at 10.15 o'clock. He was accompanied by Acting Mayor McAneny and W. Duncan Butler, vice chairman of the Citizens' Committee, whom he had invited aboard the Mayflower. As he entered an automobile to drive to the reviewing stand he was escorted by mounted police who had escorted Mr. McAneny to the pier, started their horses in a canter. As they clattered over the cobblestones, 100 strong, other mounted police took their station beside the automobile in which the President rode and escorted him during the short ride.

President Gets Great Ovation
The President rode between thousands of persons lining the sidewalks, who cheered and roared a noisy welcome. The Presidential party traveled at a brisk pace through the streets, trailed by three automobiles of secret service men and a detachment of detectives from police headquarters. Seldom had such precautions been taken before to guard a President in New York City.

Along the way the President traveled there were many detectives in the streets, some of them being stationed even on the steps of houses so that they might better observe the throngs. The secret service guard also was unusually heavy.

When the President arrived at the reviewing stand he found the Seventh Regiment, New York National Guard, drawn up in salute. The block in which the stand stood was roped off from the public but as the head of the column of mounted police dashed into the square the throng of people set up a cheer that did not end till the President had taken his place.

Mascots Amuse the Crowds
A few minutes after the President had reached the stand the head of the parade line came into view. A battalion of mounted police preceded the marchers. Next came the Marine Corps band, the Marines themselves, clad in dark blue jackets with light blue trousers and then the regiments of sailors. As each detachment passed, the President was saluted. Throughout the parade the President stood with hat, intent on the spectacle, serious of face except when the passing of the mascots from the various battleships drew ripples of laughter from the crowd.

The line was not long in passing the stand. When the detachment had passed the President, accompanied by Acting Mayor McAneny, Admiral Fletcher, officers of the Cabinet and members of the committee, left for the Hotel Biltmore, where the program called for a brief address by the President at a luncheon given by the citizens committee.

Wilson Praises Bluejackets
As the President rode to the hotel the throng on the streets gave him another enthusiastic welcome. During the ride the President stood in his automobile hat in hand, and smiled his appreciation.

"Fine, wonderful! a great set of men" were some of the President's expressions, as the blue line tramped past in front of the reviewing stand. Once his face became very grave, however, when the sailors from the Florida and Utah marched by holding aloft a standard on which was written "Vera Cruz, April 21-22, 1914." The Florida's mascot, "Dynamite," a goat, restored his smile.

President's Party Seaside
The Mayflower's arrival in New York harbor last night instead of this morning was due to a storm off the New Jersey coast yesterday. Nearly every one in the President's party became seasick. The President showed the effects of the voyage less than other members of the party, but did not feel very well, he said. It is likely that the party will return to Washington by train.

In his room the President received a number of telegrams from Washington. It was said that they contained nothing requiring his immediate attention. Some of the messages, it was said, outlined the reception by the press of Germany of the President's notes of May 13.

Memorial Day at Lebanon
Lebanon, May 17.—The official order for the annual Memorial Day observance on Monday, May 31, has been issued by C. B. Lantz, commander of Sedquick Post, No. 465, G. A. R. Final arrangements will be made for the event this week at a meeting of the general committee. Appropriate ceremonies will be observed in beautiful Mt. Lebanon cemetery. The various civic and military organizations of the city have been asked to join in the celebration. Prof. H. H. Shenk, of the faculty of Lebanon Valley College, will be the orator this year.

CAPITOL HILL SEND REPORT TO GOVERNOR

State Water Supply Commission Submits Work of Past Year With Gazetteer of Streams

The State Water Supply Commission has submitted its report for the past year to the Governor, its comprehensiveness being apparent when it is stated that a synopsis of the various subjects touched upon makes 57 pages of typewritten work.

Included in the report is a gazetteer of the streams of the state, a gazetteer of the lakes and ponds, chapters on rainfall, the water supply system, water power plants and power possibilities, floods and steam control, navigation, culms in the streams of the anthracite field, and a review of the work at Turtle Creek. The report will be printed for general distribution, and will be an interesting contribution to the history of the streams of the State.

March Fires
State Fire Marshal Baldwin announces in his March report that 802 fires occurred in this State during that month as corresponding to 602 for the same month last year. Carelessness in disposing of waste material is believed by the marshal to be the cause of the increase. About 65 per cent. of the fires were in dwellings and directly attributable to carelessness.

Orchard Demonstrations

The third week of the public demonstrations by the Division of Zoology, of the Department of Agriculture, for the destruction of the codling moth, tent caterpillars, Webworms, canker worms, and other destructive insects, as well as diseases of orchards and gardens, will commence on Monday, the 24th. In these demonstrations trained men will show how to make and apply the best and cheapest material for the control and suppression of pests. They examine specimens submitted to them, and answer questions, and give all help possible in the line of pest suppression and the production of better fruits. This work is resulting in the uplift of Pennsylvania horticulture, so that the highest authorities in America have found it distinct and pronounced in results.

CHANGES AT PENN THEATRE

It Will Be Conducted Hereafter by Management of the Victoria

The new William Penn theatre, corner of South Thirteenth street and Thompson avenue, is now under the management of the proprietors of the Victoria theatre.

The transfer took place to-day and the management says the same policy that has been characteristic of the Victoria will prevail at the William Penn from now on.

The William Penn was recently built and is a modern family theatre. Many new features will be introduced and the pictures, it is announced, will correspond in class and interest with those at the Victoria.

A Matter of Justice

While you no doubt have some friend who will be willing to undertake the task of administering your estate, yet in justice to him it is hardly fair to ask such a favor.

The duties of an Executor are tedious and call for a great expenditure of time and trouble. In order to avoid all chances of unsatisfactory administration of your estate, place it in the hands of a reliable Trust Company.
