An aged couple in Athens, Mr. and Mrs. THOMAS R. DAVIS, celebrated their 58th wedding anniversary, Jan. 24, 1880. The children, grand children and great-grand children, make glad the hearts of the aged parents, by coming each anniversary to cheer their pathway and make music in the old homestead.

We are pained to learn that W. R. FASSETT, who was for a number of years an employe in the Reporter office, and a young man of fine literary attainments, has become insane, and will be taken to the Danville Asylum. Mr. F. was brought to this place yesterday for examination, that an order from Court for his removal to that institution might be obtained.

It having been intimated by one of the delegates from the First Ward in the Convention last evening, that Senator DAVIES betrayed his trust in the Cincinnati Convention in 1876, that gentleman replied to the intimation, branding the insinuation that had been made against him as false and unjust. The Senator referred to the fact that he obeyed instructions at the Cincinnati Convention, and that his course was endorsed by the party in this county soon after, by unanimously nominating him to the State Senate for a term of four years. His straight-forward explanation was received with evidences of satisfaction by the Convention.

Court Proceedings.

The gentleman who has usually kindly furnished us with the proceedings of Court, has failed to do so this time, and after waiting too long to make other arrangements, we are compelled to go to press to-day without our usual report of the doings in the Quarter Sessions.

After disposing of the usual motions, court was adjourned until 2 o'clock, at which time the Grand Jury were sent out, after being charged by the Judge. As the time for electing school directors is at hand, the following directions as to the best method of securing a poor school are suggestive:

- 1. Elect the most ignorant, bigoted, close-fisted old fogies in the district to the school board. 2. Employ the cheapest teacher you can get, regardless of the qualifications, reputation or experience. 3. Find all the fault you can with the teacher, and tell everybody; especially let the pupils hear it. 4. When you hear a bad report about the teacher or the school, circulate it as fast as you can. 5. Never visit the school or encourage the teacher. 6. If you should happen to visit the school, take close notice of what seems to go wrong, and tell everybody about it, except the teacher. 7. Never advise your children to be obedient to the teacher, and when one is punished, rush to the school-room before your passion is cooled, and give the teacher a hearing in the matter in the presence of the school. 8. Be indifferent about sending your children to school regularly. 9. Do not be concerned whether they have the necessary books. 10. If any of the pupils make slow progress, blame the teacher for it. 11. Occupy your old tumble-down school-house as long as you can, and do not go to any expense to repair it. 12. Do not go to any expense to get apparatus, improved furniture, etc. 13. If the teacher or pupils should complain of an uncomfortable or inconvenient school-room, do not consider it worthy of notice.

14. Get the cheapest fuel you can.

In general, conduct your school on the cheapest possible plan, and let your chief concern be to find fault and devise ways of retrenchment.

If these rules are faithfully carried out, you are not likely to fail in having a bad school.
