Postal Cards.

The first postal card is said to have appeared in Austria in 1865. Since that time and the first American requisition which was responded to by Congress in 1873 by the issue of 5,000,000 cards, its recognised popularity has created an enormous demand. The number manufactured and used during the first year of their introduction was 100,000,500, and during 1879 the aggregate number issued by our Postoffice Department was 246,063,060. New York has taken nearly one-tenth of all the cards issued during the past few years, using over half a million each week. The average supply of cards kept on hand by the Government is about 250,000,000.

The manufacture from which all the cards are produced is located at Holyoke, Massachusetts. It is an unpretentious building both in its exterior and interior appearance, and most insignificant when compared with other Government buildings. The manufacture is carried on by a New York firm under the strict superintendence of a Government agent, who attends to the printing and shipment of the cards, while the other business is under the direction of contractors. The immense work is done by about 40 employes, who are under the most rigid discipline. The printing is done on four immense steam presses, which are kept in operation day and night. The cardboard from which the cards are manufactured is furnished in large sheets, each of which receives the impression of forty cards. These sheets are then cut and the cards thrown into a hopper which revolves as soon as twenty-five cards are received and empties them on a table, where they are examined and the imperfect ones thrown out. They are then boxed and ready for shipment. Every process of the manufacture is strictly watched and no opportunity is afforded for fraudulent practice. The registers of the presses are kept locked, and accessible only to the agent by whom they are regularly examined. A record is kept of the damaged and imperfect cards, and also of the number manufactured, which must balance with the amount of cardboard supplied. So carefully has the work been guarded that not a single postal card has been lost since their introduction in this country. The new International card has recently come into demand, and about 2,000,000 have already been furnished.

The great popularity of the postal card in the mail service has led the French Government to investigate the matter with reference to its introduction and adoption in France.

It will be some time before the taxpayers of this country find out exactly how much the last extra session of the Democratic Congress cost them. A new item of the cost occasioned by that champion Democratic blunder has just appeared. It is in the form of a deficiency estimate of $450,000, submitted by the Public Printer, and made necessary by printing ordered to be done by the Democrats at the extra session, and not provided for in the regular appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Among the latest subscriptions to the Irish famine fund are $25,000 from the bank of Nevada, also liberal sums from parties, including the fire brigade and marine corps. Bartley Campbell, Lester Wallack and others, and all or nearly all places of amusements are to give performances for the fund on St. Patrick's day. The great cornetist, Levy, offers to play in Wall street or the stock exchange for the benefit of the suffering poor of Ireland.

The Senate, in executive session yesterday confirmed the Supervisors of the Census for North Carolina, Kansas, Colorado, California, Oregon, Arizona, Dakota, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Washington Territory and Wyoming.
