Cesarism.

We in charity conclude that there are some men who honestly believe that our Republican form of government will be endangered if Gen. Grant, or any other man, should hold the office of President, for a third term. If there are any such men, their number is far smaller than most men suppose. Separate and independent States are an insuperable barrier to any such movement if any danger exists. Gen. Grant is not the man for such work. Where is there one word, act or tendency, which does not establish his loyalty to the Union? Gen. Grant stepped down and out of the White House at the end of his last term, and to-day, is a private citizen.

The real danger of this Nation, is not centralization or imperialism. The intelligence of the people stands in the way. Disintegration stares us in the face, just as it did in 1861.

Let any man read the debates in Congress during the extra session, when the ex-rebels believed they had full control of the Nation, and he will find that disunion is the real danger.

Yes, disintegration stares us in the face, not imperialism. Read the revolutionary movement in Maine, which had its origin in a Democratic desire to clutch the United States government with the bloody hands of traitors. It is evident that we are resting upon a volcano, which because of its long suppression, is liable to burst upon us at any movement. The reappearance of the silent man of destiny upon the scene, should the choice finally be ratified, will speak peace to the troubled waters and give us a government again which will be feared as well as respected. —Owego Times.

Interesting Statistics.

The following facts in regard to the cost of distribution of food products will prove of interest to our readers: In Paris, with the market arrangements now in operation, it costs twenty-four dollars to distribute every one hundred dollars' worth of table supplies. In Philadelphia the cost of distribution is forty-five per centum. The first cost of meat and vegetables in New York, independent of distribution is only ninety-one per centum of their first cost in Paris; that is, ninety-one dollars in New York is equivalent to one hundred dollars in Paris as respects the actual cost of raising and delivering table supplies within city limits. But so inconvenient, complex and unwieldy are our arrangements for distribution to the customer, as compared with those of Paris, that while the Paris housekeeper has to pay twenty-four dollars on every one hundred dollars for distribution, his New York compeer pays one hundred and three dollars and thirty cents to cartmen, wholesalers, retailers and middlemen generally, on every one hundred dollars' worth of table supplies that passes through Washington Market, thus raising the cost of living to a higher figure than that which prevails in any great American or European city.

Gen. Grant arrived at Puebla and was saluted by a salvo of artillery. The depot was decorated and crowded. He was met by the Government and city Council committees, and escorted to the Palace de La Hidalgo, by several bands of music and a large procession. Bands played until a late hour before the palace. General Grant telegraphed Mrs. Grant that his stay in Puebla would be prolonged, and that she might meet him there with all their party. The General visited the Governor of the State yesterday morning.
