Meeting of the Officers of the Regiment yesterday.

A meeting of the 9th Regiment officers was held here yesterday. Co. A, Capt. WILT, of this place, is the only company in the regiment from this county; all the other companies, we believe, belong to Luzerne and Lackawanna counties. The officers have an Association, and hold regular stated meetings for the discussion of matters pertaining to the welfare of the National Guard.

The following named officers arrived yesterday at 11 o'clock, and were met at the depot by Capt. WILT and Lieut's LYON and TAYLOR: Col. REYNOLDS, Lt. Col. KRECK, Maj. BENNETT, Adjutant MOORE, Capt. HARVEY, Commissary, Capt. DAY, Paymaster, Maj. HARVEY, Surgeon, Capt. WENNER, Co. II, Capt. JONES, Co. E, Capt. CRANDALL, Co. B, Capt. STARK, Co. F, Lieut. WENNER and MUMAW, Co. H, Lieut. PARSONS and STURDEVANT, Co. I.

The business meeting was held at the armory of Co. A, in the afternoon, and was very interesting, a number of the officers taking part in the discussions.

In the evening a banquet was given by Capt. WILT and his Lieutenants, at the Ward House, to which quite a number of citizens were invited.

At an early hour the officers and invited guests assembled in one of the parlors of the Ward House and spent an hour in social chat, listening to camp song, etc. At eight o'clock the dining room doors were thrown open and Col. REYNOLDS, placing himself in front, as a brave officer should do, gave the command, "follow me, boys;" an order that was obeyed with alacrity by civilians as well as soldiers. The collation was elegant and bountiful. The bill of fare was not exactly "regulation," in military parlance, but was one of Mrs. JORDAN'S best efforts in the culinary art. After all had done ample justice to the good things set before them, Captain WILT, welcomed in a neat and appropriate speech his brother officers, and announced that for the remainder of the evening, by virtue of his position as chairman of the committee of arrangements, he would issue orders.

The first toast: "The Ninth Regiment, and its Officers," was responded to in a pleasant and happy strain by Colonel REYNOLDS, who urged his fellow officers to put forth every effort to render themselves proficient and make the "Ninth" the best regiment in the state. In eloquent language he magnified the calling of the true soldier, and showed how military education and discipline developed the highest type of manhood, both morally and physically. The Colonel is a pleasant speaker, and evidently is interested in the National Guard, and especially the Ninth Regiment.

The next toast, "The National Guard or the Citizen Soldiery," brought Capt. HARVEY to his feet. He pointed out the great importance of the organization in this country, as almost the only means of defense in case of insurrection or foreign interference.

N. C. ELSBREE, Esq., was asked to respond to the "Veteran Soldier." The speaker said he was entirely ignorant of military affairs. In the literal meaning of the term we have no veteran soldiers in this county, but if by veteran soldiers were meant those who had become proficient in the art of war, who had won the encomiums of the world for bravery and daring, then the whole army of the rebellion were justly entitled to the appellation. The heroic deeds of our army during the late war were not dimmed by the record of the "Old Guard" even.

"The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania," was eloquently spoken to by Senator DAVIES. The rapid strides the state has made since the revolutionary war was referred to, and the fact that she furnished more troops during the rebellion than any other, was asserted. The Senator spoke of the provision made by the legislature for properly equipping and clothing the National Guard, and closed by urging thorough preparation for service; but expressed the ardent hope that the necessity for their services might never arise.

J. HOLCOMB, on the part of the press, welcomed the visiting officers, and assured them of the hearty sympathy and willing aid of the newspapers in building up the National Guard.

Quartermaster TAPPY, of the First Regiment, who happened to be present, was called for and made a few pleasant remarks.

Quartermaster SANDERSON, of the 12th Regiment, gave a short review of the operations of the Regiment during the labor troubles of 1877, and added some practical suggestions which were well received.

The speechmaking was interspersed with singing, by several of the officers, who rendered some of the old plantation melodies, which were so much enjoyed by the boys in blue down in Dixie during the war, most admirably.

At 10:30 the party broke up, and the visiting officers took their departure for home. One noticeable feature of the entertainment was the entire absence of any intoxicating beverage. Capt. WILT is a stout tetotalter, and never countenances the use of liquor as a beverage under any circumstances.

If the officers of the Ninth Regiment represent the morale of the National Guard of the state, we have a military force of which every citizen may justly feel proud. They are intelligent, dignified gentlemen who would adorn any position in society.

The meeting here will result in benefit to the regiment by awakening a deeper interest on the part of our citizens. We hope that the Association may frequently meet here, and assure them that they will always receive a hearty reception.
