Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, yesterday introduced an important resolution providing for a commission to take into consideration the whole question of interstate commerce. The commission is to consist of three Senators, appointed by the President of the Senate; three members of the House, to be chosen by the Speaker, and three additional Commissioners, to be appointed by the President. The Commission has set before it the whole vast problem of interstate commerce, with the request that it will report its suggestions for the better regulation of the same to the next Congress. The time is short, and it is not surprising that Senator Cameron in the remarks he made in introducing the resolution, expressed himself as being not over-confident of a favorable solution of the problem. The inquiry will hardly fail, however, to add something to the general knowledge of the subject or to suggest some measure which may partially relieve the difficulties and inequalities of the existing system.

It is gravely proposed to set up a Territorial Government for Alaska, the same being provided with all the machinery required by a populous region. The bill for this purpose, just completed by the House Committee on Territories, contemplates a Governor, Secretary of the Territory, and other functionaries, five courts, and a Delegate to Congress. The total white population of Alaska is about 250, and for purposes of political illustration, the number of voters is usually put down at fifteen. To give this handful of people a Governor and a representation in Congress, to say nothing of the courts, would be a farce of the broadest kind. The bill of the Committee on territories might very properly be called a bill to create official sinecures. The real motive of the promoters of this grotesque scheme has not yet been made known, but there is every reason to suppose that somebody is looking out for a chance to get a living at the expense of the United States Government.—N. Y. Times.

The Washington correspondent of the Tribune reports a decided change of sentiment among Republicans at Washington, in relation to the third term, since the New York Convention at Utica chose a united delegation for Grant. An eminent member of the party believes the danger of General Grant's nomination to be very great; because the men who are managing his campaign are the oldest and most experienced politicians in the party; they have the full power of the machine to work with; they have Pennsylvania, New York, and, in all probabilities, Illinois, to start with; and other States will be likely to wheel into line before the Convention is held, or on the first ballot. And the masses of the people are with the politicians, and the politicians who favor the nomination of Gen. Grant are with the people. There is no use of attempting to stem the tide. The Tribune begins to realize the fact, and in due time will take its old place among the ablest and most uncompromising of Republican journals.

Judge John Rice was a very violent secessionist, and in a speech urging secession, said: "Why,—the Yankees! If they show fight we can whip them with pop-guns!" A short time after the war Judge Rice was making a speech at the same cross-roads where he had made his boasting speech before the war. One of the audience asked him if he was not the same Judge Rice that spoke there in 1860. "I am," he replied. "Well, didn't you say, that we could whip the Yankees with pop-guns?" "I did, and we could have done it; but,—em, they wouldn't fight us that way!"
