For the Ladies.

A well known modiste visited an importing house in New York this week and made copious notes of the fashionable fabrics she saw, which were just opened and which are designed for the coming season. She reports most of the new spring styles have something striking about them that will at once arrest attention. The new embroidered batistes are unique in design, and in combinations of form and color show an ambitious attempt at decorative art. There is every variety of pattern, and the shades which indicate what fashion's decree for the next months is, vary from pale "old lace" to the delicate light brown. Threads of gold run through it all. The broad bands are for the dress, and the narrower ones for the corsage and sleeves. The latest open satin fronts—mostly white—for dresses are adorned with jet and faceted beads of polished steel, or embroidered with creamy seed pearls. Some spring mantles of gros grain silk and Radzmere, profusely covered with novel bead work, are exhibited, of which only a few duplicates have been or are to be sold in Europe. The new feature of the morning dresses shown was the addition of a touch of delicate embroidery. White cambric is the favorite material. Baya, deer is the name of a new cloth, which is used with charming effect with plain goods such as camel's hair or cashmere. It is of olive-green, brown or other dark ground, lighted up with threads of gold or other light colors. The fabric takes its name from the Nautch dancing girls, by whom it is much worn. The season brings no radical change in the character of print goods. The material appears to be improved in quality and the figures are delicate, yet clear and artistic.

The Board of Health, of New York, has issued a circular "How to tell Diphtheria." "Give heed," it says, "the moment that you observe signs in your child of unwonted weakness, fatigue or physical debility, particularly if it is accompanied with a little fever. Make the child frequently open its mouth, so that you can observe its throat. It is the throat that the lay observer will first observe any signs of diphtheria. Never mind how red or inflamed the throat may appear. That does not indicate the disease. But the instant that you see a white spot and detect a bad odor run for a doctor. The white spot will grow. Other white spots will appear, and eventually they will run together in great blotches if the disease is not checked. The time to summon medical assistance is before these spots run together.

The proposed International Cotton Exposition, to be held at Atlanta, Ga., starts off with the most flattering prospects. The citizens of that city responded with great promptness and enthusiasm. In fact their earnest determination has secured the success of the undertaking. All the solid men work with a will and a vim to carry through the enterprise. The railroad and steamship lines, home and foreign, are liberal subscribers. The programme of the exhibition is now being prepared, the list of premiums and awards. It will be the first exhibition of cotton products ever got together.

The women of Wisconsin though beaten are not dismayed. They are re-organizing for another effort to obtain the right of suffrage.

Ex-Governor William Beach Lawrence, of Rhode Island, an eminent jurist is dying at a hotel in New York, age 83.
