This week is vacation in the Graded School.

HARRY MIX found his spectacles advertised in the REVIEW Saturday.

The weather on Saturday would have done credit to a December day.

Not very good maple sugar weather and a short season is predicted.

To-day will close the auction sale at the Jennings hotel.

Remember that Dr. PAYNE'S lecture at the Institute this evening begins at 7:30, sharp.

A few days ago the Sugar Run ferry boat making a trip across the river collided with a raft passing down the stream, striking with such force as to run several feet upon the raft, which floated on with the prize taking the ropes that held the boat and carrying it some ways below. The next day the boat was put into position and ferrying resumed.

Wyalusing, which has had two lawyers, E. F. GOFF and W. H. THOMPSON for some time past, is about to lose them by removal from the place. But we feel free to say that so enterprising and thriving a village as we know that to be, will be supplied with legal advisers as soon as it is known that there is a vacancy.

The new stores will all be occupied in a few weeks. E. C. OLIVER & SON will occupy the one next the Troy House as a furniture store, WOOSTER & BOOTHIE occupy the middle store of the Oliver Block with a fine crockery and china store and grocery, DOBBINS & JOHNSON occupy the one next NEWBURY, PECK & CO'S as a hardware store, and NEWBURY, PECK & CO. will get into their new quarters as soon as possible, the finishing touches being put on rapidly.—Troy Gazette.

A sharp contest for the post office at this place is now on the carpet. The contestants are O. D. STEBBINS, Major R. W. BANNATYNE and Major H. W. BARDWELL, the present incumbent. We are informed that the wife of one of the candidates is a distant connection of the President. If this be so and Garfield has any of the Grant blood in his veins the gig is up with the other two gentlemen.—Tunkhannock Standard.

The people of Tunkhannock had better let well enough alone. They have one of the most efficient postmasters in the country, and one whose military record and services for the party entitle him to the position.

"A Fair Barbarian." Mrs. BURNETT'S last and most interesting story is concluded in the March Scribner, and we advise every one who has not read it to do so at once. The heroine—"A Fair Barbarian,"—is a young American lady who has lived in Nevada and who comes upon an English country town, with the suggestive name of Slowbridge, to astonish its inhabitants by an individuality of character wholly unique. It is not fair to forestall the reader's interest by a revelation of the full plot of the story, but its more salient points may be suggested. The heroine is a thoroughly interesting and original creation. She is thoroughly American. She is entirely unconventional in her ideas, when tried by English standards. She confounds and amazes the rigid devotees of propriety with whom she comes in contact in this sleepy English village. All look upon her with mingled curiosity and wonder. She absolutely horrifies Lady Theobald, who is the head of Slowbridge society, and who embodies all that is arrogant, angular and domineering in the worst types of the British regulator of the proprietries. The raciness of the scenes that attend the meeting of these parties is indelible. The American girl is not an untamed hoyden, by any means. She is, on the contrary, true-womanly in the best sense of the term. She is kind of heart, sympathetic and self-respecting—a really lovely, if a somewhat unconventional, person. She is high-spirited, too; and while she manifests a willingness to learn the standard of those among whom her lot is temporarily cast, there is a charming youthful dignity about her which is one of the best points in her delineation. Of course she finds her lover. Of the result that attend his wooing, we leave the reader to learn from the story.

Dark blue dinner sets, Asiatic pattern on Parisian granite—a great bargain—at C. P. Welles' crockery store.

White wash lime at George Ridgeway's, Bridge street. 190

Mr. C. A. Plummer is in town and will canvass our village for a most useful and convenient article, in the shape of a set of combination brushes and handle, which only need to be seen to be appreciated. Mr. Plummer is an intelligent, reliable gentleman, and we cheerfully commend him to the confidence of all on whom he may call. 3-23-1wk.
