Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson's personal impressions of the late Mr. Carlyle, as conveyed in the unpublished letters written at the time of his first visit to England, are to appear in the next number of Scribner's Magazine.

Four students of Syracuse University were arrested Saturday charged with committing an assault upon a fellow student, Ezra S. Tipple. Tipple was kidnapped, bound, gagged and taken five miles in the country, where he was tied to a tree, his head shaved and abandoned by the students.

The new Mexican Southern railroad elected the following: President, U. S. Grant; Vice-President, G. M. Dodge; Secretary, James H. Work; Treasurer, Russell Sage; Executive Committee, Jay Gould, Frank Work, Russell Sage. Resolutions were adopted requesting Grant to proceed to Mexico to present the interest of the Company.

The late Czar is said to have been not so apprehensive of plots against him during the last few weeks of his life as he was last year; so that he fell into the old routine he was accustomed to follow before the days of the duel between Nihilism and Imperialism. His new wife, however, had not an easy moment when he was away from her. Although a woman of easy temper and lymphatic, she was a prey to the gloomiest apprehensions whenever he went abroad, and his return was always the occasion of a domestic festival.

The Southern question seems to have dropped out of Congressional calculations. Secretary Kirkwood takes a sensible view of the contested Southern elections. He thinks the alleged frauds should be investigated with great care, so that no injustice be done to either party. For a remedy, in cases where it becomes evident that there was either an unfair election or a dishonest count, he suggests that a new election be ordered. This is the remedy which has already met the approval of many students of the Southern question. In case the new election is like the old, unfair, still another can be ordered, and so on until a fair one is secured. In this way the people of the South will be taught that they must either allow their Congressmen to be elected fairly or else go unrepresented.

Commenting on the present status of the coal trade the Engineering and Mining Journal remarks that "it is said that the companies are quite harmonious. Although we do not anticipate any actions that will enable buyers to secure, later in the year, cheaper coal than at the present time, there has evidently been some ill feeling engendered during the past fortnight. The public has heard enough of programmes during several years past, and will only show confidence in the actions of companies. To run full time means ruinous competition among the producers, while over-production, be it only a couple million tons, will be but little better. Although we do not believe in combinations as permanent benefits to trade, yet we do believe in fully and not half carrying out an adopted plan. Believing that the companies will enforce the curtailment plan for regulating prices we believe that it would be better for both the companies and the public if this was rigidly impressed upon the public mind by a literal enforcement of the restriction immediately. There will be a large amount of coal required this year, and if the public waits too long, it will certainly have to pay very much higher freights and very likely much higher prices for coal. All matters considered, the present time appears to be as advantageous as any for those with capital to lay in supplies."
