A correspondent of the Philadelphia Times writes as follows of Hon. Wayne MacVeagh's tenacity of opinion, etc:

It will doubtless surprise you very much when I tell you that I do not believe that Attorney General MacVeagh will stay in the Cabinet a year. It seems that he has an idea that the Attorney General should be the Attorney General and that he ought not to be interfered with in any matters relating to the Department of Justice. When it was proposed to send in the nomination of Stanley Matthews for the Supreme Bench, MacVeagh opposed it so earnestly that the President became very angry. Indeed, it is said, that MacVeagh almost refused to make out the nomination, and that Garfield had to put his foot down, very heavily. In two or three other cases, notably in an Illinois appointment, where MacVeagh was determined to beat Logan, who wanted a Grant man appointed, the Attorney General has shown a great deal more independence than was expected of him. He already shows signs of being disagreeably tenacious, and I may say quarrelsome, and some fine day he and Garfield will part company. How angry that would make William E. Chandler, the new Solicitor General! Mr MacVeagh has taken the house of Ex-Attorney General Williams for a year and is thinking of buying it. It is an immense double brick house, on a high terrace, and is furnished throughout. It is on Rhode Island avenue, within a stone's throw of the fine residence of Commodore Upshur, now occupied by General Harry Bingham, and the center of fashion.

A late dispatch from Washington says the causes leading to the disaffection of Attorney-General MacVeagh and Postmaster-General James were briefly considered, it is said, in Tuesday's Cabinet meeting. The President will undoubtedly make a firm stand in defence of the nominations of Chandler and Robertson, and no one seems to believe for a moment that the name of either will be withdrawn. If, in consequence of the confirmation of either or both of these gentlemen, Attorney-General MacVeagh finds it incompatible with his ideas to remain in the Cabinet, it is believed that his resignation will be promptly accepted, and a new man appointed to his place without delay. There is good authority for the statement that Attorney-General MacVeagh opposed Chandler's selection, but yielded so far as to postpone any intention of resigning until it was seen whether the Senate would confirm or reject his nomination. If Chandler should be confirmed Attorney-General MacVeagh's resignation is among the possibilities, although his friends will endeavor to persuade him from taking such a step. There is some reason to believe that he has already decided to remain in the Cabinet even in the event of Chandler's confirmation. Postmaster-General James declines to talk about his views in regard to the nominations. It is not believed that he will tender his resignation.

Phila. Times.—The Greenbackers are the first in the field with the call for a State Convention. It will be held at Pottsville in June, the particular day to be designated by the county committee of Schuylkill. That is about the only place where much of a Greenback party is left in this State, and there the Republican party has become so mixed up with the Greenback party that it is difficult to distinguish one from the other. The Greenbackers have not much to look forward to—they are not even worth trading with any more, except in spots—but their early activity calls attention to the fact that as usual, there will be an election next fall, although not one to excite any very general attention. The only State officer to be chosen is a Treasurer to succeed Mr. Butler. The Republican State Committee will meet within a few weeks to fix a day for a State Convention, but there is no hurry. People will be just as well satisfied if no nominations are made before September. This a good year to take a little rest.
