WILLIAM GARRIHAN and STONE DODGE, two discharged nail-works men, had some misunderstanding in settling yesterday afternoon, and threatened Mr. RENDALL with personal violence; in fact they armed themselves with clubs and made such demonstrations that Mr. R. had them arrested. They were taken before Justice CODDING last evening by Policeman BUBNS, but were too drunk for examination and were committed in default of bail for a hearing to-morrow morning.

Monroe.

Rev H. Armstrong has received a call from the Presbyterian church at Aspinwall corners in Wells township, this county. Not quite certain that he heeds the call, but it is certain that it is a good place, where the "light afflictions" fall few and far between. They are said to work wonders for a minister sometimes.

A drenching rain did not prevent the Shale Sisters from drawing a full house last evening at the M. E. Church. And then there was "little Myrtle;" all combined to draw and entertain. The audience was as wet as Gideon's fleece; but what of all that? No body knew it or thought of it. Even the invalids never recurred to their wet clothing during all the entertainment, and did a congregation go away better satisfied. We could not decide which they were best capacitated to do, to sing a spirit up to glory, or to sing an angel down to listen. Some one else must determine it.

Mrs. De Plume is like one of your Michigan lady readers and correspondent, she is certain to grab up the REVIEW the first thing when the mail comes in. She is a hearty old republican. N. D. PLUME.
