The Best Education.

As these are vacation days with most of our colleges, the commencement exercises having already been held in most of them it may not be inopportune to say something on the important question. There are reported to be in the United States some 350 colleges to which can be added several hundred seminaries, academies and institutes, lesser lights in the educational firmament. This is a state of things of which we all are proud as we know that education is one of the corner stones of our Republic, one of the levers of our power and a leading cause of our greatness among the nations of the world. Of late years there has been a "big run" with "our boys" for an education at these institutions and to take a course, graduate and receive a sheep skin is a commendable enterprise, a worthy accomplishment for which we honor them, notwithstanding the side show attachments in way of base ball, rowing matches and an occasional play spell at hazing, one of which the public has condemned more or less. In view of this "run," a discussion is going on as to the real benefits and practical usefulness derived by the student in the course. Among the objections raised is that the tendency is to drift the mind into new and foreign channels, drawing it from natural grooves, thus warping those in-born tastes, traits and propensities which when properly developed, make the great geniuses of the day and the master intellects of the world.

It is further urged that the training not only draws the mental faculties into new grooves, blunting those natural inclinations with which the student is gifted, but often leading him to choose a pursuit in practicing which he encounters friction and thus pegs away through life, out of gear and pulling against the tide of reaction. It is also said that the many books, lectures and the general paraphernalia surrounding him over-tax, befog and bewilder the mind, cramming it with theory, stimulating it beyond its natural strength and capacity, thus making a wreck of what might have made a brilliant intellect if properly developed. And last it is claimed that the studies are of no practical use to the masses, being adapted to those occupying high positions in the literary and scientific world. These are a few of the objections raised. Others could be given but we deem it unnecessary.

By giving these objections we would not have the reader infer that we subscribe fully to them nor that we are opposed to colleges or the boys taking a course. What we would specially say is, that too much of the matter obtained during the course is of but little practical use in the general pursuits of the day, particularly to the business class who figure so largely in all the leading enterprises and who need vigorous minds, molded in natural channels or a practical and experimental training in early life fitting them for the pursuit they follow. This is a business age and the United States a business land, all enterprises moving off at electric speed, affording no delay to unearth fossils nor time to pursue.

The masses have no appetite for dead languages nor abstruse sciences; they choose the rough and ready, and useful matters of life, cutting off all superfluities in science, art and literature. We have no snail pace and foggy systems, such as prevails in Europe. Here our air is charged with electricity, it permeates every avenue of our political and business sphere, giving a double value to time and curtailing our use of it. Life is too short and our routine of living run on too rapid a scale to give four years to college, and two or three thereafter learning a profession. It may do for some, but not for the masses in whose interest we speak. The right metal is the main thing and if that be in a person he will dig out a name and fame without the hot house culture of the college. If the dead languages or high methods, or any deeply hidden science be needed, he will fathom the depths and polish his mind and shine with the great geniuses of the age, and best of all he will be vigorous and self-made.

Owing to the increased demand for ice, and the inability of the regular team that runs on week days to run on Sunday, I have made arrangements with McIntyre's dray to deliver ice to our regular customers on Sunday mornings, commencing and continuing during the heated season.

JOHN ADAMS.

Having sold my retail Furniture and Undertaking business, known as the Bridge Street Furniture Store to E. B. Pierce I would respectfully recommend those in need of goods in his line to call on him at the old stand.

I also wish to inform those indebted to me that it will be necessary to settle the accounts soon.

HOTEL FOR SALE.—I offer the American Hotel property for sale on very reasonable terms—one half the purchase money down and the balance in ten years. Possession given April 1, 1881. There is a good barn connected with the property. This hotel is located on the corner of Bridge and Water streets, in Towanda borough. The free bridge and new depot near to it make this hotel desirable for any one wishing to engage in the hotel business. Call upon or address, JOSEPH G. PATTON, Towanda, Pa.

ICE!

John Adam's Ice Wagon has been running for the last month, delivering ice to his many customers. Ice gathered one mile and a half above town. Orders solicited, and prices satisfactory.

"What everybody wants is the best organ for the least amount of money: Therefore everybody wants the Burdett; and when you've said that, you've told the whole story."

So say the brightest and busiest organ dealers throughout the land, who are furnishing this matchless instrument to a musical public, which is rapidly learning to distinguish its marvellously pure and beautiful voice from that which is not music. For sale by J. A. Manville, No. 3 Bridge St., Towanda.

The finest building lot in Towanda borough corner of Poplar and Second streets, between the residence of Hon. E. O. Goodrich and E. Walker, will be sold cheap. Apply to O. D. Kinney FARM FOR SALE.—I offer for sale on reasonable terms a valuable farm, located in the valley of the Towanda creek, about 2 1/2 miles from Towanda, containing 75 acres, under a good state of cultivation, well watered, a young orchard of choice trees, good framed dwelling house, and fine large barn—with underground stabling. I will sell this farm on long time, or exchange it in part for property in Towanda borough.

JOSEPH G. PATTON.
