Garfield's Grains of Gold.

EXTRACTS AND SENTENCES FROM HIS SPEECHES AND LETTERS.

After the battle of arms comes the battle of history.

For the noblest man that lives there still remains a conflict.

I would rather be beaten in right than succeed in wrong.

Present evils always seem greater than those that never come.

Growth is better than permanence, and permanent growth is better than all.

It is one of the precious mysteries of sorrow, that it finds solace in unselfish thought.

Statesmanship consists rather in removing the cause than in punishing, or evading the results.

Ideas are the great warriors of the world, and a war that has no ideas behind it is simply brutality.

Eternity alone will reveal to the human race its debt of gratitude to the peerless and immortal name of Washington.

I doubt if any man equaled Samuel Adams in formulating and uttering the fierce, clear and inexorable logic of the revolution.

Through the whole web of national existence we trace the golden thread of human progress toward a higher and better estate.

Occasion may be the bugle call that summons an army to battle, but the blast of a bugle can never make soldiers or win victories.

It is as much the duty of all good men to protect and defend the reputation of worthy public servants as to protect public rascals.

An act of bad faith on the part of a state or municipal corporation, like poison in the blood, will transmit its curse to succeeding generations.

Bad faith on the part of an individual, a city, or even a state, is a small evil in comparison with the calamities which follow bad faith on the part of a sovereign government.

If there be one thing upon this earth, that mankind love and admire better than another, it is a brave man; it is a man who dares to look the Devil in the face, and tell him he is a devil.

We should do nothing inconsistent with the spirit and genius of our institutions. We should do nothing for revenge but everything for security; nothing for the past, everything for the present and future.

In the complex and delicately adjusted relations of modern society, confidence in promises lawfully made is the life blood of trade and commerce. It is the vital air, labor breathes. It is the light which shines in the pathway of prosperity.

The germ of our political institutions, the primary cells from which they were evolved, was in the New England town, and the vital force, the informing soul of the town, was the town meeting, which, for all local concerns, was king, lords and commons in all.

There is scarcely a conceivable form of corruption or public wrong that does not at least present itself at the cashier's desk and demand money. The legislature, therefore, that stands at the cashier's desk and watches with argus eyes the demand for payment over the public counter is most certain to see all forms of public rascality.

I look forward with joy and hope to the day when our brave people, one in heart, one in their aspirations for freedom and peace, shall see that the darkness through which we have traveled was but a part of that stern but beneficent discipline by which the great Disposer of events has been leading us on to a higher and nobler national life.

There is no horizontal stratification of society in this country like the rocks in the earth, that holds one class down below forevermore, and let another come to the surface to stay there forever. Our stratification is like the ocean, where every individual drop is free to move, and where from the eternal depth of the mighty deep any drop may come up to glitter on the highest wave that rolls.

The following is from his speech to the Ohio legislature after his election to the U. S. Senate, being a tribute to the character of his competitor, Senator Thurman: "I say, moreover, that the flowers that bloom over the garden wall of party politics are the sweetest and most fragrant that bloom in the gardens of this world, and where we can fairly pluck them and enjoy their fragrance it is manly and delightful to do so."

Mr. Speaker, I know of nothing more dangerous to a republic than to put into its very midst four millions of people, stripped of every attribute of citizenship, robbed of the right of representation, but bound to pay taxes to the government. If they can endure it, we can not. The murderer is to be pitied more than the murdered man; the robber more than the robbed. And we who defraud four million citizens of their rights are injuring ourselves vastly more than we are the black man whom we rob.

GEORGE LYNCHCOME has removed his barber shop from the room over POWELL & Co's store, to his old quarters under the Meat Market, one door south of Ward House, where he will be pleased to see all his former patrons and everybody else desiring tonsorial services.

Having sold my retail Furniture and Undertaking business, known as the Bridge Street Furniture Store to E. B. Pierce I would respectfully recommend those in need of goods in his line to call on him at the old stand.

I also wish to inform those indebted to me that it will be necessary to settle the accounts soon. N. P. HICKS.

"What everybody wants is the best organ for the least amount of money: Therefore everybody wants the Burdett; and when you've said that, you've told the whole story."

So say the brightest and busiest organ dealers throughout the land, who are furnishing this matchless instrument to a musical public, which is rapidly learning to distinguish its marvellously pure and beautiful voice from that which is not music. For sale by J. A. Manville, No. 3 Bridge St., Towanda.
