The End of the Senatorial Struggle.

The result of the Senatorial contest in New York will be hailed with satisfaction by every true Republican in the Union. It has happily concluded a trying and troublesome episode in the history of the party; and now that it is over, it only remains to congratulate friends of Republican principles everywhere that the ordeal which is ended has left them nothing to fear for the perpetuity of those principles in the future.

But while we feel the sincerest satisfaction at the result which has been thus attained, we shall not be found amongst the enemies of harmony and reconciliation—not in the ranks of Mr. Conkling's defamers, taking glory for his defeat. The friends of Mr. Conkling deserve decent recognition, and whatever his error or theirs may have been, we shall not join any crusade against their leader nor his followers. Roscoe Conkling has long filled a brilliant place in the leadership of the Republican party. His voice has rung with triumphant utterance in its defence for many years in the forum and in the field. He has always been found in the thickest of the fight, and many a time in days gone by the sound of his rallying cry has summoned the Republican party to victory. It is admitted by all men competent to make the comparison that in all the eras of American eloquence—the days of Webster, Clay and Calhoun, for an example,—few men have been found Mr. Conkling's equal in forensic accomplishments, and no one in a certain sustained power of attack and felicity of phrase, his superior. To his power as a combatant, the Republican party has owed much in the days of its highest renown, when it was moulding the principles sanctified by popular approval and carried to successful issue on many a hard-fought field. For this Mr. Conkling will be always well remembered. For this he deserves and will receive the gratitude of every loyal Republican. Whatever may be in store for this brilliant leader and eloquent and accomplished public man, what he has wrought of benefit to the Republican party deserves and must command a recognition even recent errors cannot obliterate; and his record in the past is already joined to its perpetuity and is enshrined upon an enduring page in the history of his country.

Statistics have been gathered to prove that in the cities of the world which consume gas the degree of cheapness of that article ranks as follows: The lowest price is in London. Then comes Ghent, Amsterdam, Berlin, Brussels, Bordeaux, Antwerp, Paris, Lyons, Marseilles. After these come New York, where gas is three times as high as in London. In Philadelphia gas is as high priced as in New York, while coal is cheaper than in London.

The General Term has refused a new trial in the case of Flannigan, condemned to be hung at Buffalo, August 12th, for the murder of Cairns. The case will be taken to the Court of Appeals, if a stay is obtained.
