Gen. Louis Wagner has withdrawn from the contest for renomination to the office of Recorder of Deeds. In his letter of withdrawal he gives his reasons:

PHILADELPHIA, September 17, 1881.
Some weeks since one of our leading dailies published the following:

"The workings of the new rules have appalled some of the prospective candidates for city offices. It is necessary to visit nearly every division in the city. According to the code of ethics in vogue in the politics of to-day, a candidate should have a silver mine at his back, a drinking capacity equal to the camel, and be able to smoke like the stack of an iron furnace."

Conscious that I possess none of these qualifications for public office, and of a determination not to acquire the two latter, I entered upon the campaign for renomination as Recorder of Deeds, determined to prove the foregoing statement an error, and to show that strict attention to official duties would receive the commendation of the people at large as it had the indorsement of those having business at this office.

The result has disappointed me: not only is a personal canvass of the character indicated absolutely needed, but when made it is rendered substantially useless, and the will of the people is set at naught by the power and influence of a few men who have determined that the results in the several election divisions so far as they can shape them, shall be adverse to me.

As the coming campaign will demand untrammelled action from all intelligent voters; I am not willing to be bound by participating in a convention whose decision is a foregone conclusion, and which meets only to publish the behests of those who have designated so overwhelming a majority of the delegates that any contest there would render the opposition an object of ridicule.

I am also unwilling that any of my friends should by supporting me, place themselves in antagonism to those to whom they owe their positions, incurring risks of loss of place without compensating advantages, in a contest the result of which is, under existing conditions, hardly doubtful and therefore take this mode to inform the voters of Philadelphia that I am no longer a competitor for the Republican nomination for the office of Recorder of Deeds, and that my name will not be brought before the Convention to be held on Wednesday next.

LOUIS WAGNER.

The General is a temperance man from principle, and when any custom comes in conflict with his conscience he is certain to stand by his precepts, even though it be his pecuniary and political loss. He will be honored for the bold stand he has taken.

The Grand Army of the Republic has issued the following order in consequence of the death of General Burnside: Death with a sudden hand has stricken our honored comrade, Ambrose E. Burnside, for two years commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. He fell, as the true soldier would fall, in full armor and at the post of duty. Frank, brave, magnanimous, he won the hearts of thousands whose love and grief will be a dearer tribute to his memory than the proudest chaplet which fame can lay upon his grave. Officers of the staff of the commander-in-chief will wear crape on the left arm on all public occasions, when on duty during the next thirty days.

We have a suggestion for the Independents of this State who honestly desire to punish the bosses for putting Senator Davies aside at the late Convention. Let his friends organize and present his name to the Convention next year as a candidate for Governor. The prominence his candidacy this year has given him would make him a formidable competitor for the place, and if the Independents are as much in earnest as they profess, might compel his nomination and thus put the administration for once in the hands of a leading Independent.

During August 56,700 emigrants arrived in the United States.

Let it be remembered that the Michigan sufferers, for whom an appeal for aid has been made, were a hard-working, thrifty class, in many cases laboring to develop new country, and adding to the general wealth by their industry, before the ravages by fire, from which they are now suffering, occurred. They are therefore, especially deserving of material aid as well as sympathy.

There have always been, there are now and it is likely there always will be chronic croakers and mischief makers in every political party. They do not represent any faction, their chief occupation being "fault-finding." But in the Republican party they have never been and are not now an important factor; nor are they capable of much harm if not magnified into an importance which does not attach to them.

The five per cents received for redemption now amount to $23,551,000.
