A MONROE ACCIDENT.—Mrs. Tracy, widow of the late Judge Tracy, in attempting to descend a flight of stairs at her residence, made a misstep, and came down all of the stairs at once, landing at the bottom in a state of unconsciousness from which she did not recover until she was picked up by her son Henry, and conveyed to quarters more congenial to her age and afflicted condition. She will find it the most comfortable place indoors, and in bed for a few days. The disease known as "pink-eye" has made its appearance among the horses in New York and is also reported as prevalent in some towns and villages on the line of the Erie west of this village. The complaint appears to be the effect of a kind of acute inflammation of all the mucus membranes, and the inflammation is said by veterinary surgeons to be caused by the sudden changes in the weather from heat to cold. "Pink eye," it is said, is not an epidemic. It is apt to break out suddenly in a large, over-crowded stable, and it will often confine itself to that one stable. About seven-tenths of all the horses in the stable catch the disease, and about one in twelve of the horses affected die. The symptoms are loss of appetite, rise of temperature, rheum of the nose and eyes, swelling of the legs, and inflammation of the internal lining of the eye-lids. A cure takes ten or twelve days. Stimulents are the chief feature of the treatment.—Ex.
