The Rival Faction.

The opposition faction to the reigning leaders of the Republican party is now fully organized. Of the gentlemen who are to take the lead in the fight to supplant Cameron, Quay & Co., the Press says:

Senator J. W. Lee, who was chairman of the recent State Conference of Republicans, designed to promote Popular Rule and Free Representation within the Republican party, and who was directed to appoint the Executive Committee, authorizes the announcement that he has appointed the gentlemen named below. In addition, the Conference itself passed a resolution designating Senator Lee as a member, so that the whole Committee is constituted as follows:

JOHN STEWART, Chambersburg.
J. M. W. GEIST, Lancaster.
WILLIAM MCMICHAEL, Philadelphia.
SAMUEL W. PENNYPACKER, Philadelphia.
WILLIAM T. DAVIES, Towanda.
THOMAS W. PHILLIPS, New Castle.
HUGH S. FLEMING, Pittsburg.
J. W. LEE, Franklin.

This selection will be recognized as eminently strong and judicious. It combines fair geographical distribution, high representative character, earnest Republicanism, aggressive reform purposes and practical political and organizing talent. It embraces men whose faithful and disinterested devotion to Republican principles will stand unchallenged throughout the State, and who embody and represent the popular demand for the honest rule of an honest majority. The Republicans who are engaged in this popular movement—for its whole strength lies in a direct appeal to the people—believe that they are rendering the highest and best service to the Republican party in seeking to make it fully responsive to the popular will, and the members of the Committee stand as good types of this purpose.

Senator John Stewart is one of the ablest and bravest champions of the best Republican sentiment. In the Legislature he was a leader of leaders, and among the people he is the conspicuous representative of liberal, progressive, true Republicanism. His clear head, broad views, honest purpose and great capacity are a tower of strength to any cause. Mr. Geist is the fearless Editor of the Lancaster New Era, who has fought through many years for better politics. The selections for Philadelphia are admirable. The political standing and the high-representative character of Colonel William McMichael are as universally recognized as his fine intellectual gifts and his great personal worth. He brings to the cause of popular rule an honored name, a wide acquaintance, life-long Republicanism and brilliant abilities. Samuel W. Pennypacker has been devoted for years to the principles of better government, and is a gentleman of deep convictions, rare accomplishments, and clear, incisive, comprehensive thought.

The remaining names from the State are equally well chosen. Senator Davies was the representative and embodiment of public sentiment in the canvass preliminary to the recent State Convention. He is a cool, judicious, forceful man, whose counsels and cooperation will be of great service. Mr. Phillips was one of the conspicuous supporters of Mr. Wolfe in the last campaign—a widely-known and respected representative of the oil region—and his designation signifies that the Republicans who voted for Mr. Wolfe as a protest against party abuses are not to be treated as having by that act put themselves outside the pale of the party, but are welcome to act as Republicans for Republican reform within the Republican organization. Mr. Fleming was formerly Sheriff of Allegheny County and is a gentleman of large political capacity and experience. What is still more important, he has behind him in this movement and pledged to his support, as we are able to say, the real moral, intellectual, financial and business strength of Allegheny. Of Senator Lee, himself, who, against his wishes for a more retired position, has been put at the front in this movement, we need only say that he is one of the purest, most disinterested and high-minded among all the Republican leaders.

One of the first duties of this Executive Committee will be to designate the General Committee of 251, corresponding with the number of the senators and representatives from the several districts, who will initiate the work of organization. And then will come the appeal to the people.
