picture of the President: "The lower part of President Arthurs story of the good things of this world, enjoyed at table and convivial feasts. His tention at the end and ran toward the snub. His head, well covered with dark high; his brow open and serene, full in the reasoning part of it, and remarkable in its faculties of perception.them, one is sure that it is his own fault of he does not manage men instead of be ing managed by them. He is the latter only when his strong emotional nature takes from his will somewhat of it strength and clearness. From under this fine arch look fortha pair of dark eyes, whose look of blended sagacity and kind hess is remarkable. Together, the make the dominant qualities of his exHe may humor you very much, but not he face of a man capable of intense emoion, of the deepest personal attachment. a man who will never betray his friends mies."

Considerable having been said about he official paper used by President A some small people who presumabiy could find nothing of more importance to peck at-that "Office of the President of theUnited States" smacks of imperialism, the Cleveland Herald comes to the front with the following: "The late Gen. Garfield, when he was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, found that every appropriation made for the executive office, for salaries, etc., was made for the "Offlce of the President," and so when he came into the Presidential office, he caused to be engraved for use at the White House in official business for transmitting nominations, the heading to which objection has been made, and President Arthur is simply using the paper and commissions which were ordered by his predecessor. All the notes and letters witten by Presldent Arthur on letters witten by Presldent Arthur on ington, D.

Commenting on the great and almost unprecedented number of office seekers now in Washington a prominent Senator says that since the beginning of the session he has spent more than his salary in sending office-seekers home. Many epplicants from his State, some of them utterly unfit for clerical service, had pent week after week seeking an appointment, had become down-hearted some of them destitute, and as charity to them, and in order to get rid of them he had furnished them with railroad tickets to their distant homes.

The country is quite ignorant of the jewel oî a man it possosses in its new premier, Frelinghuysen. A Washington paper says that "on a wintry night, when the sleet was driving and a poor Irish woman was struggling along the icy pavement with a bundle in her arms, Secretary Frelinghuysen came out of his house on his way to a state dinner and with courtesy invited her to take his carrlage and tell the driver where to take her."

The Secretary of War, like the Secreta ry of the Navy, shows in a recent report that while the United States is, in case of war, just two weeks from an attack, it is several years, two at the nearest, from a defense.
