The following songs were omitted from the list prepared for use at the Teachers' Institute and printed in the Educator:

OUR GREETING.

Dear friends, we're glad to meet you,
Within these walls to-night;
With songs of joy we greet you
Our hearts are happy and light.

CHORUS.

We come, we come,
We come, kind friends to greet you:
Our hearts are free, and happy are we;
Yes, happy happy are we to greet you.

CORONATION.

To Zion's hill I lift my eyes,
From thence expecting aid,
From Zion's hill, and Zion's God
Who heaven and earth has made.
Shelter'd beneath th'Almighty's wings,
Thou shalt securely rest;
Where neither sun nor moon shall thee
By day or night molest.
At home, abroad, in peace, in war,
Thy God shall thee defend;
Conduct thee through life's pilgrimage;
Safe to thy journey's end.

Speaker of the House.

The N. Y. Evening Post says: "The Speaker of the House of Representatives is the most powerful man in the Government next to the President himself." and gives the following reasons for the remark:

"While it is the President's constitutional duty to execute the laws, and he is entrusted with certain limited powers to that end, the Speaker exercises, or at least can exercise, upon the making of the laws not only more influence than the President but sometimes even more than the majority of the House over which he presides. The principal legislative work of the House of Representatives is done in the committees. There bills are discussed, amended and prepared in detail. The House itself is more a voting than a deliberating body. Debate is limited and generally exercises scarcely any influence upon the votes of members, except when so directed as to make an impression upon public opinion calculated to frighten time-serving politicians in Congress. To change a legislative measure in the House against the wish of the committee having it in charge is very difficult unless the attempt be aided by the Speaker. It is, in the first place, the privilege of the Speaker to appoint the committees which prepare legislation. Then it is the Speaker who 'recognizes' members who claim the floor. It is within his power to give the preference to this one or that one as he may prefer the proposition to be brought forward by this one or that one. He construes in the first instance and enforces the complicated rules of the House which are a profound mystery to most members, and he may construe and enforce them or omit to enforce them in favor of or against motions or amendments as he may favor or oppose them, and the ruling of the Speaker is but rarely reversed by a vote of the House. The action or pretended action of the House of Representatives is not seldom so rapid and confused that scarcely anybody but the presiding officer knows what is going on, and he may sometimes put motions to a vote, and declare them carried or defeated without attracting the attention of anybody except those immediately interested. It is therefore assumed by many that when the Speaker is in favor of a measure his support is almost as good as a majority, and that when the Speaker earnestly opposes a bill its friends will have to be very keen and active to save its chances. It is needless to point out how dangerously such a power may be abused when entrusted to an unscrupulous man."
