The following from a Washington letter to the Philadelphia Times is complimentary to Senator Cameron's interest in his constituents if not to his methods of accomplishing ends:

The arrangement of the committees of the House shows that Mr. Keifer honestly endeavored to carry out his part of the bargain. He delivered to the State of Pennsylvania seven chairmanships and, what is worth to that State more than all that was left, the practical control of the committee of ways and means. While we are decrying bossism, let us accord it whatever virtue it possesses. It is possible I may overrate the importance of these results, but I must give to Mr. J. Donald Cameron the credit of having the nerve and influence to carry out the plain suggestion which has given the State of Pennsylvania a standing in the House of Representatives never before accorded her, even under a Speaker chosen from her own Commonwealth. What would she have had under Mr. Kasson or under Mr. Hiscock? Perhaps the same thing under the same circumstances; but the circumstances which made Keifer Speaker could never have been brought to bear on the other two. Kasson would never have appealed to the President and could have given nothing in return. The President could not have bought Kasson. He would not have purchased Hiscock. Keifer was the only available Stalwart material, and the keen sense of his fitness for the work expected of him gave the administration a solid basis whereon to operate. Keifer is a square man and has faithfully undertaken to fulfill his contract.

A Washington special says a gentleman who is very near to the President, and who has had an interview with him since he arrived in New York, says that General Arthur has decided to appoint ex-Senator Sargeant, of California, Secretary of the Interior, and William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, Secretary of the Navy. Nothing is likely to prevent the appointment of Sargeant; and Chandler, he says, will certainly be nominated unless General Grant shall desire to actively interfere and make a personal appeal to the President against him. This, it is thought, General Grant may do. The other Stalwart friends of the President, Conkling and Platt, are reported to be satisfied with the nomination of Chandler. So it seems that the leading Stalwarts, with one exception, have graciously consented that the President shall put a friend of Blaine in the Cabinet as the representative of New England. It is averred that General Grant too has very anxious that ex-Senator Choffee, of Colorado, should be made Secretary of the Interior. But the trans-Mississippi country could not agree upon Mr. Choffee as the representative of that region.

The Post's Washington special says the Senators expect the tariff discussion will become general in both Houses soon after Congress re-assembles. Beck is preparing a speech. He expects to present some startling facts which he obtained during his visit to Atlanta and thinks he will be able to show that the cotton manufacturing industry of the South not only needs no protection, but also that New England will need far more to be protected against Georgia than against foreign competition. Kelly thinks revision might be a good thing as to a few articles, but decidedly opposes a wholesale reduction of the tariff.

It seems to be generally conceded that Gen. Beaver is to be the Republican candidate for Governor. He ought to be unobjectionable to every earnest Republican. We suggest as an equally available candidate for Lt. Governor Senator Davies of this county. They would make a strong team in every particular, and would be triumphantly elected. No one will complain of a leadership that gives the party such candidates.

Some of the independent Republican papers of the State are finding fault with the "committee" that recently met in the Girard House for not naming a candidate for governor. The failure to do this it appears to us is the best evidence of their wisdom. The address which the committee put forth urges the voters to attend the primaries and express their wishes. The pulling forward of candidates by cliques is just what they are finding fault about.

The holiday trade in New York is reported to have been the greatest ever known. Hotels, stores and streets have been full of people, and money has seemed to be plenty. Certainly greater attractions in the way of holiday gifts to suit the circumstances and purses of all, were never before offered, and the business done in them is a sure indication of general prosperity.
