

A DELICATE BRIDE.
Between Yreka and Jacksonville, Oregon, there was a wedding, last winter about the time of the deep snow, when Mr. Pelham and other citizens were invited in that cold country. The smiles of the respective parties to the marriage were in attendance, and the party was rather after the old-fashioned style, made up of neighbors, their wives and babies, and everybody that happened to be stopping anywhere within accessible distance.

It was a pleasant affair; but, like all similar assemblages, it dispersed, and the bride returned to her chamber, first having whispered to the fond groom, "don't come up for half an hour." This being a first request, he obeyed, waited the time anxiously, nor let the hand of the ticking clock pass by a second limit, ere he had gone to her with whom his life was joined. Rapping gently at the bridal chamber door and receiving no reply, he entered the room unbidden, and saw his wife lying on the bed, arrayed in night-gear of purest white, presenting a picture of beauty, taste and loveliness, beyond comparison. One step further, a closer look, and the blood rushed back to his heart—she was dead: Loudly calling for help, father, mother, sister, bridesmaids, all the household, rushed to the room. The mother discovered that her daughter still breathed, but, horror upon horrors! there lay the empty vial from which the fatal draught had been taken.

Messengers were dispatched for physicians, the patient was rubbed and sprinkled, and hopes were entertained of her revival, symptoms looking favorable. At this juncture, some one picked up a piece of folded paper from a table, on which was written, in the delicate hand of the fair young bride:

"Be not alarmed, dear husband!—Feeling that the occasion would be too much for my nerves, I have taken chloroform."

"YOUR OWN WIFE."

Among the Seminole Indians there is a singular tradition regarding the white man's origin and superiority. They say that when the Great Spirit made the earth, he also made three men, all of whom were fair-complexioned; and that, after making them, he led them to the margin of a small lake, and bade them leap in and wash. One obeyed, and came out of the water, purer and fairer than before; the second hesitated a moment, during which the water, agitated by the first, had become muddy, and when he bathed, he came out copper-colored; the third did not leap till the water became black with mud, and he came out with his own color. Then the Great Spirit laid before them three packages, and out of pity for his misfortune in color, gave the black man the first choice. He took hold of each of the packages, and having felt the weight, chose the heaviest; the copper-colored man then chose the next heaviest, leaving the white man the lightest. When the packages were opened, the first was found to contain spades, hoes, and all the implements of labor; the second contained hunting, fishing and warlike apparatus; the third gave the white man pens, ink and paper, the engines of the mind—the means of mutual, mental improvement, the social link of humanity, the foundation of the white man's superiority.

THE PRINTER'S LITANY.—From want of gold, from wives that scold from maidens old, by sharper "sold"—preserve us! From toppish sneers, mock nutcrackers, and woman's tears—deliver us! From sizzling files, coal black eyes, and babies cries—protect us! From seedy coats, protested notes, and leaky boats—protect us! From creaking doors, a wife that snores, and all such bore—defend us! From the landlords hand, a greedy hand, now infesting our land—preserve us! From a solid steak which is our fate, sometimes to partake—henceforth deliver us! From making "pi," which does annoy, the tempers try—prevent us!

DRUNKENNESS AMONG WOMEN.
The Round Table publishes a startling article upon drunkenness among women. It says the vice is prevalent among fashionable ladies, and that some of the most elegant of them will pass this Summer not at Saratoga or Newport as usual, but at an asylum for nebrites. The writer intimates that the vice of fashionable drinking is now more prevalent among the ladies than among the gentlemen of this country, that certain dressmakers make it a point to furnish their customers with drink, while in some stores bottles of wine are also kept on hand for lady shoppers, and in others the merchants allow their boys to go to the nearest bar-room for liquor when ladies desire it. Whiskey and brandy are the favorite drinks of these ladies, and as some of the saloons they frequent do not have these liquors on the bill of fare, a neat little sign—"if you do not see what you want ask for it," gives the hint to those initiated. In dressmakers' bills the significant item "small trimmings" often covers up the expense of liquors which the lady has ordered through the modiste who panders to her vitiated taste.

while at the watering places a bribe to the waiter procures a secret supply of liquor, which by the connivance of the landlord, is charged as "extra luncheons." It is asserted that girls of eighteen, daughters of most respectable New York merchants, have been seen grossly intoxicated in Broadway stages and upon the public streets, and that no superiority of intellect or social position is sufficient to guard a lady against this vice.

HOW TO AVOID THE CHOLERA.—First, don't get it on the brain.

1. Endeavor, if possible, to keep a clear conscience, and two or three clean shirts.
2. Every morning and evening read a chapter of Petroleum V. Nasby or Josh Billings.
3. Whenever you have nothing else to do, take a bath.
4. Avoid political assemblages, and if you are fond of clubs, don't try Uncle John's.
5. Work "eight hours a day,"—and more if you feel like it.
6. Go to all places of amusement advertised in the daily papers.
7. Rise with the lark, but avoid the larks in the evening.
8. Be above ground in all your dwellings, and above board in all your dealings.
9. Love your neighbor as yourself, but don't have too many of them in the same house with you.
10. Eat when you are hungry, drink when you are thirsty, and sleep, but be careful what you eat, what you drink, and where you sleep.
11. Avoid the appearance of evil, but be constant to the right, even under difficulties.
12. Avoid public conveyances, even if you are driven to the necessity of making use of your legs and walking two or three miles a day!
13. Avoid long dresses (this to the women) and leave the cleaning of the streets to the street Commissioner.
14. Tell the doctors that "whenever they come within a mile of your house they are welcome to stay there all night."
15. Keep clear of the Copperheads, or any other "snakes."
16. Don't get scared till you are hurt nor even then.
17. Get your life insured.
18. Make your will.

"I WILL BE YOUR MOSES, &C."
Andrew Johnson, says the Harrisburg Telegraph, pledged himself before high heaven to be the Moses of the black men.

How did he fulfill this covenant?
By relating at the indiscriminate slaughter of the black men and their families at Memphis by a mob of rebel police officers and privates of the rebel army.

Our Moses!
Andrew Johnson declared that if there were but a dozen Union men in any locality in the South they should constitute the governing element.

How has he fulfilled the declaration?
By ignoring the loyal Government of a State in order that he (Johnson) might let loose the rebels of a city, who were thirsty for the blood of Union men met in convention to discuss and deliberate civil affairs. WHILE THE UNION MEN OF NEW ORLEANS WERE SITTING IN CONVENTION, WITH THEIR STARS AND STRIPES FLOATING OVER THEIR HEADS, THEY WERE ATTACKED BY THE REBEL MOB OF NEW ORLEANS, CARRYING BURNING FLAGS! Andrew Johnson telegraphed to these rebels that they were justifiable in attacking the Unionists! In view of these facts, and with a full knowledge of the language we use, we pronounce Andrew Johnson guilty of the massacre of the Union men of New Orleans, guilty of plotting with rebels to still the voice of those loyal to the Government.

The devotion of the infamous Mayor of New Orleans to the rebel cause during the war is well illustrated by the following incident recently related by Gen. Butler at a social gathering:
Mayor Monroe, after being imprisoned as a traitor, was about to be released upon taking the oath of allegiance, and had actually the pen in his hand to affix his signature, when word was brought by the rebels with the loss of forty thousand men. Believing this canon, Monroe refused to sign, threw down his pen, and was taken back to prison, from which he was afterwards released by the action of the authorities at Washington.

The ladies and those of the other sex who are accustomed to go into ectasies over a "love of a bonnet," are often in danger of breaking that clause of the ten commandments which prohibits "bowing down to anything made in the likeness of anything in the heaven or on the earth, beneath, or in the water under the earth." Those who adore the present intemperate do not, they may rest assured, infinge upon this commandment.

Every Copperhead in Congress voted for the increase of salary, and fifty Republicans voted against it.

General Logan says A. Johnson is the man made President by a single constituent—Booth, the assassin—and that he well represents that lone constituent.
