

Local Matters.

WAYNESBURG:

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1866.

Go to Odenbaugh's Drug Store for pure Liquors.

Our paper is necessarily crowded this week, and if it contains much that is uninteresting to many of our readers, they may impute it all to Andy Johnson.—Several communications are laid over.

Q. Where can Oils and Paints be had? A. Hoffman & Roberts' Drug Store.

Wm. G. Scott, of Fayette county, has been arrested for abstracting $2000 from the safe of the Adams Express Co., at Greensboro. The robbery was committed some time since, but the company were baffled in settling the conviction. Most of the money is reported recovered. He will be lodged in the jail at this place.

A cure for Asthma, and Hoof disease generally at Odenbaugh's Drugstore.

Enterprise.—The thrift and improvement of the mercantile portion of our community has received new impetus from the establishment of a Hardware Store in our midst. Mr. Thos. Braden is the energetic mover in this enterprise, and is deserving of the thanks and patronage of our citizens generally for thus supplying a very deplorable deficiency in our commercial interest. Feeling that his scheme is laudable—worthy of support—we commend him to public confidence. See advertisement in another column.

Q. Who keeps trusses and shoulder-braces? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

"It Might Have Been"—A FIRE.—On Wednesday morning last, sparks from a chimney ignited the roof of Mr. Jesse Rinehart's dwelling, in our borough. It was discovered and extinguished before any damage was done, beyond burning a few shingles. It is becoming a dangerous season for fires—these blustery days—and our citizens cannot be too careful in cleaning chimneys and adopting other measures preventative of disaster.

Go to Odenbaugh's Drug Store for pure Carbon Oil.

A WORD TO SOLDIERS.—There is no earthly use at getting your discharges recorded on the docket of this county, as the record of it would not be evidence for any purpose whatever. Again, the officer who does it violates his duty in using the docket for a matter foreign to its purpose and design, and entirely without authority of law.

Q. Who keeps the best and cheapest drugs? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

HAZZARD & SONS, Booksellers and publishers, Monongahela City, Pa., have sent us a piece of music entitled La Belle Videre, the Blind Boy's Carol Waltz, composed by Cyrus C. Black, arranged for the piano by Rudolph Halzbrink, and respectfully dedicated to Hon. George V. Lawrence. They have our thanks.

Go to Odenbaugh's Drug Store for Dye Stuffs.

TAKEN TO THE PENITENTIARY.—In the court proceedings at Pittsburgh, last week, we notice the sentencing of Harvey Dollison, of Greene County, notorious, to five years and six months in the penitentiary, for stealing. This must be the third or fourth term for Harvey.

Q. Where can you get pure ground pepper? A. Hoffman & Roberts' Drug Store.

HERE AND THERE.—Never buy goods of those who don't advertise. They have old stock, inferior quality, extortionate prices, or, there is something wrong with the proprietor.

Q. Who keeps the best dye stuffs? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

The winter, so far, has been unusually mild. We are having, at present, a cold snap, with light snows. The boys are waiting anxiously for the skating season to open.

Go to Odenbaugh's Drug Store for pure Medicines.

CONFIDENCE GAME.—A New Lisbon, (Ohio) paper says a newly married couple in bridal costume, recently stopped at that place to spend a few days of the honeymoon. The bridegroom borrowed $50 of an accommodating gentleman and then mysteriously disappeared. This bride wept and tore her hair at the being left without money and without friends, and the sympathizing inhabitants of the town contributed liberally for her relief—about one hundred dollars being donated. She then disappeared,—the promising couple having played the same game in several towns of the state.

Q. Who keeps the best assortment of lamps? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

OPERATOR TO A CHARM.—For some years the best thing produced among the various forms of reed organs, melodeons, etc., has been the "Cabinet Organ," made by Messrs Mason & Hamlin, of this city. Besides the beauty and great power of tone for so small an instrument, furnishing the greatest amount of organ tone for the smallest price, it has the advantage of a double bellows, acted upon by two blow pedals.

They have now added to the resources of the instrument a new one, wonderfully effective and wonderfully simple, which they call the "Automatic Bellows Swell." It is, in fact, a contrivance for swelling and diminishing the sound at pleasure, without the aid of a separate swell pedal, but simply by the same action of the feet which works the bellows by the blow pedals. With a little practice it operates to a charm, and the swell and "dying fall" of harmonies becomes as obedient to the performer's will and feeling as if the reeds were set to vibrating by his own breath.—Deight's Journal of Music.

Q. Who keeps Kneeland's Rat Paste? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

"Lew" Johnson, under the Wright House, serves up ten Oysters in every still—from a ten cent bowl to a dozen in the chaffing dish—twelve to the dozen.

Q. Who keeps Shiner's Cough Syrup? A. Hoffman & Roberts.

It will be noticed by advertisements in to-day's paper that the old firm of Geo. E. Mison & Co. has been mutually dissolved, and that L. K. Evans has "set up" for himself. It was hardly supposable that such good fortune could befall an ex-ed. of the Republicans, but as all know Mr. Evans, not only as L. K. but "O. K." in everything he undertakes, it is useless for us to make an attempt at "putting" him. It is no more than proper, however, for us to state that he has a well stocked establishment, is prepared to suit all by selling reasonable, and that he still retains Mr. Clay Mison, the efficient and gentlemanly clerk of the old firm, to attend to the wants of his customers. For anything in the Dry Goods line, try him!

THE WASHINGTON COUNTY MURDER.—As this late horrible tragedy in Washington county is absorbing public attention at present, we open our columns to a full description of particulars as taken from our Pittsburgh exchanges. The Commercial of the 7th has the following from a correspondent in the town of Washington:

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 5, 1866.

It becomes my sorrowful duty to send you an account of one of the most fiendish murders in the annals of crime. Last night (December 4) Robert W. Dinsmore, a "well to do" farmer residing about five miles north-west of this place, in Hopewell township, was murdered before the very eyes of his wife and daughter. He had been to town and had been trying to get a $1,000 bond changed, and he returned home late in the evening. About 10 o'clock, P. M. while he sat reading a newspaper and his wife was getting ready for bed he heard a rap at the door. He asked who was there. A voice replied that Mr. Miller, (his next neighbor) was sick. When Mr. Dinsmore heard that, he went to the door and found two men there. One asked him if he would let one of the boys go down. He replied that they must be mistaken, that he had no boys. They then sprung into the house and caught hold of him, one of them saying, "you are the one we want." And then commenced a deadly combat, which ended in Mr. Dinsmore being shot, and cut in the breast in such a manner that death ensued in about three hours. Though he was wounded to the death, he fought on, and the robbers were compelled to knock him down with a chair. One of the daughters sleeping up stairs, hearing the noise, came down, and her little sister making a noise up stairs so scared the villains that they fled without getting any plunder. Mrs. Dinsmore was compelled to be an eye witness to the horrible tragedy, being unable to get away through fright. As soon as the murderers had fled, Mrs. Dinsmore, with the assistance of her two daughters, (they being the only persons about the house,) closed and locked the doors, fearing that they might come back and kill them all. After one and a half hours had elapsed, one of the daughters went and aroused the neighbors, who arrived just in time to see Mr. Dinsmore die.

The news spread like "wild fire," and caused intense excitement through town and county. Court being in session in this place, the County Commissioners, by the advice of Judge Achison and the Bar, offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the murderers. About 10 A. M. this morning a man by the name of Robert Fogle was arrested by Sheriff Smith and Detective Greer, they thinking he filled the description given by Mrs. Dinsmore of the largest murderer. He was placed in jail, and the house he had been staying at was searched, and a suit of clothes belonging to him all covered with mud which was not yet dry, and a pair of boots with one heel off, which was almost conclusive evidence against him, for a heel that filled the boot nicely was picked up at the scene of the murder—Fogle took his arrest quite coolly, until a chain of evidence was produced against him that left him no room for hope. He then confessed that he was guilty of the crime, and that his confederate was a beardless boy, not more than seventeen years of age, named William Montgomery, of Canton township. He further said that they had the plot laid for three weeks to rob Dinsmore. At present writing, Montgomery is still at large, but his arrest is expected every minute. He can hardly escape, for the whole county is aroused.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. DINSMORE.

At the coroner's inquest, the wife of the murdered man testified as follows: Mrs. C. Dinsmore sworn—I am the wife of Robert W. Dinsmore, deceased. I live in Hopewell township, Washington county, Pa.; was at home during the day and evening of the 4th of December, 1866; near ten o'clock, evening, we were about going to bed; Mr. Dinsmore was reading near the back window of the room where his body now lies, called the sitting room. I heard some one tapping at the front kitchen door; I felt afraid, as it was an unusual hour, and old Mr. Dinsmore got to let them in without inquiring who they were; he then asked who they were and what they wanted; some person replied that Mr. Miller was very sick. Mr. Dinsmore then opened the door, this person asked where the boys were, and if some of them would come down; Mr. Dinsmore told them that this was the wrong place; that we had no boys; he said to them that he supposed it was Mr. Stenning's that they were inquiring for; two men then rushed into the kitchen, and said to Mr. Dinsmore, "you are the man we want," he replied, "what do you want with me, you rascals you?" they had a seven-eighths in the kitchen for a good while; Mr. Dinsmore rushed through the sitting room into the hall, where I think they caught him, but I was so confused that I am not certain whether they brought him back or he came back himself. I went to bed when the rap was first heard at the door. Mr. Dinsmore having told me to do so; when Mr. Dinsmore first came in from the kitchen they were following him; the first one had a pistol in his hand; when I saw the pistol, I hollered, "Do not shoot," thinking he was going to shoot me; I had got out of the large bed, and was standing on the trundle bed; after they had come back from the hall, they tumbled as far as the dining table; I then saw the tall man, who had come in first, shoot twice towards Mr. Dinsmore's body; the tall man then told the other to strike him (Mr. Dinsmore), when he took a chair and struck him on the head; Mr. Dinsmore then said "Oh! I am shot." I think he said he supposed he was killed; the men then started and ran out the door at which they came in, and left it open after them; the window was broken when they were scuffling in the kitchen; if they were white men they were blackened; I think they were young men; one of them who did the shooting was a tall man, he had dark clothes and a broad brimmed hat; the other one, who struck Mr. Dinsmore with a chair, was a small man, I think, and a fair-haired; I think the pistol was together that he could not have time to load between them; my opinion is that it was rather a long pistol.

Near one o'clock we sent my daughter Nancy for Mr. Robert Caldwell, the reason why we did not send sooner was that there was but three of us in the house—myself, Nancy, Lavinia and Eda, who is about nine years of age, and we were afraid that if any of us were to go out they would rush in again and kill us all. I immediately after the men went away, fastened all the doors. After they had been shot at I struck with the chair. Mr. Dinsmore went into the hall, fainted and fell; he lay there perhaps for ten minutes, then rose up and walked into the sitting room, near the fire, and sunk down on the floor; I think he was in sensible then, but we placed pillows under his head, and he became sensible after awhile; he said he had fainted, he said, "I see it now—they have shot me," I asked what I thought they had done to him, and if they had taken his pocket book; I told him they had not. He then asked what they did to him. I told him I did not know; I asked him if he had any difficulty with any person, he said he had not, that he knew of; I think he then asked who I thought they were—I told him again I did not know. He was insensible when Mr. Caldwell came, I thought he was dead, but Mr. Caldwell thought he breathed a few times after. The voice of the person who first spoke at the door was a soft one. I did not hear them say anything after the deed was done, if they did my attention was directed to Mr. Dinsmore, and I did not hear it. The children made a confusion up stairs and in the hall, but I do not know whether the men were alarmed at it or not. I was stripped ready for bed when the rap was first made at the door, and that was the reason Mr. Dinsmore told me to go to bed when he went to open the door.

The Gazette of the 7th says: We announced yesterday that a young man named Fogle had been arrested in Washington, Pa., on the charge of being implicated in the Dinsmore murder. Fogle confessed to the crime, and stated that his accomplice was Wm. Montgomery, a young man of about eighteen years of age, and son of Hon. William Montgomery, ex-member of Congress from that district. Fogle stated that they did not intend to murder the man, but only to get his money. They knew that he had been to Washington the day before enjoining to get a $1,000 bill changed.

During the scuffle with the murdered man, Fogle lost the heel of one of his boots and a button off his coat. He was tracked to Washington by the peculiar track he made, and when captured was still further identified by the buttons. He is a young man of desperate character. He formerly lived with Mr. Harvey near Washington, and through his influence, sent to the House of Representatives for inebriability. He subsequently entered the army and served with no credit to himself. Since his discharge he has been living with Hon. Wm. Montgomery on the same road with Dinsmore, the murdered man.

Montgomery was captured yesterday afternoon, as we are informed, and is now in confinement with his companion in jail. He is a mere youth, but is represented as being already a hardened criminal.

The Steubenville Herald gives the following particulars of his capture: Wm. Montgomery, one of the murderers of Robert W. Dinsmore, near Washington, Pa., was arrested about 5 o'clock Friday evening at Wellsburg, and is now lodged in jail at that place.—He came into Wellsburg foot-worn and weary, apparently in a famishing condition, and repaired immediately to the Virginia House, where he was asked for something to eat, stating he was hungry and tired. He was recognized by Messrs Baird and Duval and immediately arrested. He surrendered himself willingly into the hands of the law, and delivered to the officers a large knife and revolver which he had on his person.

PITTSBURGH GENERAL MARKET. Pittsburgh, December 10, 1866. The week closes very dull, business continuing depressed in almost all branches of trade. Consumers are looking for low prices, and scarcely purchasing enough to supply immediate wants. The whole market is barren of any feature of special interest. The same inactivity is noticeable in other cities east and west.
