WHISKY AND WATER. CINCINNATI ON A BREW—GENERAL DEMORALIZATION.

Deer creek flows into the Ohio at Cincinnati. On Deer creek have been located whisky distilleries. A fire in these distilleries the other morning sent large quantities of whisky into Deer creek, by which it was carried to that point in the Belle Riviere where the corporation pumps make their drafts of fluid for the city's use.

The demoralization which has resulted to this community from the mingling of that Deer creek whisky with the hydrant water is almost beyond calculation. It was not known for some time why a boozing atmosphere seemed to hedge us all about.

One aged and highly respectable citizen, who never tasted liquor in his life, and consequently could belong to a temperance society with impunity, was seen winking his way homeward the other day, with his hat jammed down on the back of his head, and his race redolent and jolly, while he was singing:

"Land o' my lord! how goodly the night! 'Twas on this night that I met my dear old maid in the moonlight."

"He pulled it off, swung it wildly around his head with a whoopee!" and then shield it with scientific exactness upon the bust of Douglas, giving a horrible grotesque leer to that late distinguished statesman as it dropped over his left eye.

The excellent old gentleman above alluded to had determined to put an end to his worthless existence when he came to a full realization of what he had done; but, looking over a morning paper to see if it was going to be a very good day for suicides, any how, he read about the Deer creek whisky.

Since it has become generally known that there is whisky in the hydrant water, there has been a wonderful increase in water drinking. People drink it now who haven't tasted it before in years. They get up in the night to drink it. At bars they call for 'Deer-creek straight.' The water works have been compelled to keep all their engines at work, pumping day and night to supply the demand.

One old lady remarked that she hadn't tasted such (sic) 'licious tea' for forty years. Ha! Ha! please! Then, as the evening wore on, they had toasts with their tea, and songs, keeping time with the tea-cups, thumpingly, on the table.

"Kitchen girls were great sufferers from the fumes of boiling water. Washer-women all over the city, bending over their washbasins, which were nothing less than great wooden bowls of hot whisky punch, dropped down in a helpless state of intoxication, and had to be put to bed and dosed with valerian and assafeida pills.

"It was a most unaccountable state of affairs, but they settled it at length by agreeing to forgive each other if they wouldn't do it again. They initiated a new member, pledging him several times in bumpers of Deer creek. He was finally moved to make a speech—

"The Government Inspector of Whisky is about to-day levying the usual two dollars tax on all hydrant water."

THE MORNING STARS. I had occasion, a few weeks since, to take the early train from Providence to Boston, and for this purpose rose at two o'clock in the morning.

Such was the glorious spectacle as I entered the train. As we proceeded, the timid approach of twilight became perceptible; the intense blue of the sky began to soften; the smaller stars, like little children, went first to rest; the sister beams of the Pleiades soon melted together; but the bright constellations of the west and north remained unchanged. Steadily, the wondrous change of mortal eyes, shifted the scenery of the heavens, the glories of night shifted into the glories of dawn.

From the Pittsburgh Courier, THE SCAFFOLD. Execution of Robert Fogler. FOR THE MURDER OF ROBERT W. DINSMORE.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE MURDER AND SUBSEQUENT TRIALS. DYING CONFESSION OF FOGLE, IN FULL PARTICULARS OF THE EXECUTION.

Yesterday afternoon (Wednesday, 15th inst.) at half past one o'clock, Robert Fogler, convicted of the murder of Robert W. Dinsmore, was hanged at Washington, Pa.

At the February term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Washington county, Judge Achesson on the Bench, Fogler was arraigned for the murder of Mr. Dinsmore.

On the day following the murder, Sheriff Smith visited Mr. Dinsmore's house, and received from Mrs. Dinsmore a description of the assassin.

On Tuesday evening, the 4th inst., about six o'clock, I left town and went to Hon. Wm. Montgomery's farm and met his son, "Babe," whose name is William.

asked where Stemmens lived, and as he stepped out of the door to show me, I stepped in behind him and told him I wanted his money. I had a navy revolver in my right hand, and called to "Babe," who was standing at the corner of the house, to come in.

Upon the conclusion of the trial and after the sentence of death had been pronounced upon Fogler, he apparently resigned himself to his fate, and endeavored to make his peace with God.

Yesterday morning, the streets of the borough appeared deserted, and no signs were visible that would indicate to a stranger the tragedy that was about to be enacted.

At the February term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Washington county, Judge Achesson on the Bench, Fogler was arraigned for the murder of Mr. Dinsmore.

ter-in-law of the prisoner, who resided at his father's house, testifying that he retired to bed at ten o'clock on the night of the murder, and had been at home during the entire evening.
