France and the Litin creed, the scepture of Char-humann. THE FRENCH AND GERMAN SOLDIER. A year ago lo-day I went from Paris to Cologne by rairoad and, looked for the first time upon the Rhine, as I wrote you. It was a very hot day, but there was no iroubleon the line, except the rude-into our car near the Belgian border, and Rhiled it with their masty tobacco smoke, without asking leave. To-thy things probably things look quite otherwise, and that whole line of communication must be swairning with the messengers of war.-King William of Frussia, the morning telegram says, is to-day at Cologue, and those regiments of horse that went every morning by our hotel on ther way to their drill ground move with quicker step. There, however, as everywhere throughout Giermany, the traveler saw the preparations? for war. I met the soldlers constantly hit heir marches and toxercises, and it seemed strange that the air should smell so much of war at a time of entire peac. The government un-doubtedly saw the conling storm, and looked upon the war with France as a question only of time. The Prussian soldlers are a very solid, hardy set of men, and look as lithey would stand theirground against any energy. They have nothing of the jamity, dask-ing air of the English troops, nor the resites, and examined theur carefully. They were mostly quety oung mean and full of fre, yet they did in decar-ry with them an appearance of calm settled military loyally, such as marked the English or Anicerican for German Soldler. Napoleon appears to us to have had no reasonable provocation in the spanish succession, and this was, undoubledly not the motive, but only the pretext for the declaration. Thermolive for the declaration is the necessity for deciding by arms which of the two shall be the dominant power in Europe, and the years will soon decide the issue for Prussia, un-less France prevents that issue by the sword. The choice of an American between the two partice can not be doubtful. It does not depend upon the merits; of the two monarchs, or our preference for the solid German King over the willy Franch Emperor but issue and Latin races. We belong to the great Germinic race, and hold its essential ideas against latin currents and pressential mono-ing the despot and the Pope as a despoint, and therefore will go with Prussia against Nonoleon-Hilood is theke than water, and our American nond the dominant of the Pope as a despoint, and even therefore will go with Prussia against Nonoleon-Bio the dist of liberty and progress, and even bound to work for liberty and progress, and even her leading itoman tatholics are inore carnets to be Cantolic than of the Bonan to the Papai throng. When these two clubs played in St. Clair the score was Pastimes, itol; Suspension, 31. They then played in Minersyille, the score being Pastime, 61, and the Suspension 64. Then, the both clubs being even, they determined to play the third gamp for the championship on neutral ground, Schuylkill Haven being selected as they played and Partsville was to produce the neuground, Schuylkill Haven being selected as they place, and Potsyille was to produce the un-pire, which they did, and a very competent one too. Thus, everything being arranged, both clubs, regained to Schuylkill Haven, and no doubt we would have had a pfeasant time had it not been for the uncontrollable material the Suspension Club is composed of. But, no mat-ter, I must now return to the game. T.
