Suppose we had to advocate the election of a man with such a name as that, and we had, to mention him three or four times in one article! It would be worse than reiterated allusion to The Women's Branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

An editor in New Jersey feechtly publish-ed a long obituary notice of an uncle of his who died out in Australia and left $400,000,000 to his only nephew. The intimate acquaint-ances of the editor regard this story as the preliminary measure of a carefully-devised scheme to get trusted for a couple of winter undershirts. Persons who have such articles for sale are warned not to give credit to any editor who tells such a story unless he has with him the dead body of the uncle, with the money in the parifalosits pocket of the Tweld's meir are commonly employed-never less than eight. About 175 toris of hay were can this year, and Secured early, conling into requisition the active services of a highly valued Bullard todder. The stables, substan-tially, built and slate-roofed, which Shelter the 13 or 14 horses constantly used on the farm, and 30 or 40 hoarders, it is a pleasure to walk through, and one idea carefully, carfarm, and 30 or 40 boarders, it is a pleasure to walk through, and one idea carefully, car-ried out here stuck us as at least ingenious and no doubt useful. Horses often acquires the detestable vice of kicking by accident-ally striking their hoofs against the post-which commonly terminate divisions fo-tiveen stalls, and sometimes the resistance which the mere grain of the wood offers, if there is no projecting post, but merely which the mere grain of the wood offers, it there is no projecting post, but merely an exposed apright, is sufficient to induce the animal to try it again and keep trying; so Mr. Weld carries back the horizontal boards of his partition across the uprights at the rear, and the horse's hoof slips harmlessly off; soon tiring him of using his muscle for the demolition of early-ty space. Other features of the place's call for favorable comment—the tasteful and at-tractive mansion among them—but dur suf-vey of call was necessarily brief. "Weld Farm" is an ancestral possession in the fam-ily of the present proprietor, having been occupied by his father and grandfather, and, we think, their progenitors also, and one can hardly take in, in an hour, all the results of intelligent and patient@industry, persistently exerted for a hundred years.—Cor. of County Gentleman.
