Visits the President For a Farewell Chat. TAKES A WALK IN THE WOODS.

With the Chief Executive the Baron Rambles About For Two Hours. Our Relations With Japan Sustained, He Says.

KANEKO SAYS GOODBY

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 11.-Baron Kaneko, the special commercial envoy of Japan to the United States. spent three hours yesterday with President Roosevelt. Throughout the recent peace negotiations Baron Kaneko maintained the closest relations with the president, acting as an intermediary between the Japanese government and Baron Komura and the president. It can be said that Baron Komura trusted him as he trusted nobody Baron Kaneko arrived on the 12:20 p. m. train from New York. Awaiting him at the station was one of the president's carriages, in which he was conveyed to Sagamore Hill. After luncheon the president and Baron Kaneko "rambled through the woods" for over two hours, returning to the president's house only in time to reach the village for the 5:02 train to New York. "My visit to the president." said the baron, "was purely social. He invited me to take luncheon with him, and I came. After luncheon we rambled through the woods for nearly three hours.

"Oh, no, there was nothing significant or even important about my call. I expect very soon to leave for Japan, and I desired to say farewell to the president. I have not decided definitely when I shall leave America, but it weather of the late fall and winter. "My mission to this country?" said he, repeating an inquiry.
