RESISTED ARREST

Waverly—J. A. Pratt of Buffalo, a bridge builder employed on a job at Ulster, came to town Saturday and after filling up on Waverly in toxicants was staggering about the streets, when Officer Corcoran undertook to arrest him. The prisoner was a powerful fellow and resisted the officer. Before he was landed in the local lockup his head was badly cut and it was necessary to call a physician who administered anaesthetics before the injured head could be sewed up. Last night when arraigned before Justice Hoagland he pleaded guilty to a charge of public intoxication and paid a fine of $5.00.

DIED IN WRECK

Waverly—Detective Hempstead, for some time in the employ of the Erie Railroad Company, was fatally injured in an Erie wreck at Susquehanna last night. Mr. Hempstead was well and favorably known in this city and the news of his sudden death was a shock to his friends. His last visit in Waverly was on the occasion of the Firemen's convention last week, when he appeared in new uniform. One engineer and a fireman were also killed in the wreck.

Miserable Side Walks

Waverly—While there are a few good side walks in South Waverly there are a whole lot of miserable poor ones which should be looked after before winter sets in. A lady resident fell on one of the walks last evening, but fortunately sustained no serious injury. Had she been laid up a suit for damages would have been instituted.
