Girl Disrobed by Lightning

Williamsport, Pa.—Lightning which struck the house of William Bowers in Ranthowen, near here, played some remarkable pranks. Miss Campbell, of Philadelphia, who was visiting the Bowers and was sitting near the stove on the ground floor when the lightning struck the house, was the victim of this odd freak. As the bolt crashed through the roof she lost consciousness for a moment, and when she recovered she found all her clothing lying in a smoldering mass near by, but she was uninjured.

GIRL SLEEPS IN PARKS.

Wanders for Months in New York City and Subsists on Scraps of Food Left by Visitors.

New York.—A good-looking young woman who has been living for weeks in Central park gave herself up to the police the other night and slept on a comfortable bed in the House of the Good Shepherd. She told Mrs. McCauley, the probation officer of the Harlem court, that for 30 days she has been eating scraps from lunches and odds and ends of victuals tossed away by the visitors in the park. She said she felt she could sleep for a week in a real bed.

Her name is Florence Kelly, of Providence, R. I. The other morning Patrolman George Steers, who was stationed at the entrance to Central park, at One Hundred and Tenth street and Seventh avenue, saw her sitting happily asleep on a bench near the lake.

Steers asked her what she was doing there. She wept and said that for days and days she had been without a home, sleeping sometimes in Central park, sometimes in Mount Morris park, and wandering here and there, without money, work, or friends. She wore a white shawl and dark skirt. She was without a hat and her light brown hair was disheveled. Her shoes were almost worn out.

"I am nothing but a vagrant now," she said.

She willingly accompanied Steers to the subpolice station in McGowan's Pass tavern. There she said she was 23 years old, of Providence, R. I. Her mother, she told the sergeant, died when she was a little thing. For several years she was a child's nurse. More than a month ago, she said, she had lost her place, and since had wandered around the parks.

Lon Mangies His Trainer. Clarksville, Tenn.—During a performance of a circus here Lion Trainer Charles Duncan, of Louisville, Ky., was seriously injured in a fight with a lion. When Duncan entered the cage the animal sprang toward him. Duncan slipped and fell, the lion biting and crushing his left shoulder in a frightful manner. The lion was forced into a corner by the use of hot iron and Duncan was rescued. He was in a serious condition.

A Serious Blunder. Thin Boarder (delightedly)—The beef is very tender to-day. Mrs. Silmdiet (wildly)—My goodness! That new girl must have gone to the wrong butcher.—N. Y. Weekly.
